Strike Is Ended At Key Aircraft Die Casting Plant

Employes Go Back To Work Today; Agreement Must Be Ratified by Union

An agreement to end the 10-day-old strike at the Harvill Die Casting Corporation plant, which had threatened a Pacific Coast-wide shutdown of aviation plants was reached last night, the Office of Production Management announced at Los Angeles.

The report of the agreement, which is subject to ratification by the full membership of the C. I. O. union today, said it covered "virtually all points," with provision for immediate return to work and later conferences to complete the agreement.

Other defense-hampering strikes, rapidly churning up threats of Congressional restrictive action, appeared meanwhile to be increasing in intensity rather than yielding to determined Government efforts at conciliation.

Bethlehem Strike Threatened

As the Presidentially-appointed National Defense Mediation Board prepared to hold its organization meeting here tomorrow, main strike centers presented these situations and developments:

A. C. I. O. walkout at the giant Bethlehem Steel Co. plant at Bethlehem, Pa., today was threatened if officers of the Employes' Representation Plan carry out their plans for an election. And an E. R. P. officer was quoted by the Associated Press as saying "we most certainly will hold it—C. I. O. or no C. I. O."

The A. F. L.'s machinist union was reported from San Francisco to have authorized a strike April 1 against San Francisco firms of the Pacific Drydock Association and California Metal Trades Association holding $300,000,000 of defense contracts.

Harvester Plant Guarded

At Chicago, an attempt to open the strike-bound McCormick works of the International Harvester Co. was set for today, and Acting Police Commissioner John Pendegrast ordered 1,300 police to the plant to protect those who want to return to work.

Midland Steel Products Co.'s strike was threatening, meanwhile, to close several automobile plants in the Detroit area through cutting of the supply of manufactured parts. Harry H. Bennett, of the Ford Co., told the Associated Press that the Lincoln plant would be forced to close today unless the strike is settled at once.

Representative Carl Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee, prepared to call hearings on his bill "to confer statutory powers" upon the new Mediation Board, including a clause aimed at elimination during the emergency of the "strike-breeding question of the union shop."

The Bethlehem steel dispute centers on the C. I. O. contention that the employes' representation plan had been declared an illegal organization of the National Labor Relations Board. It is a company-dominated group, the C. I. O. charged.

Bethlehem makes a large part of the armor plate vital to military equipment. A 27-hour strike at the firm's Lackawanna, N. Y., plant was settled by OPM intervention a month ago because of the urgency of armor-plate production.

The San Francisco strike if it materialized, would affect at least 3,600 skilled workers and would halt production of cargo vessels, destroyers, cruisers, submarine tenders and other Navy equipment. The strike vote requires approval of the Bay area metal trades council

Rain Is Forecast

Balmy Day Lures 35,000 To D. C. Zoo

Clouds and occasional rain today will follow the first Sunday of spring, the Weather Bureau said last night.

From a low of 32 degrees at 6:15 a. m. yesterday the mercury rose to 59 at 4 p. m., sending Washingtonians out of doors.

Nearly 35,000 persons visited the Zoo, and many watched a fire company put out a small brush fire behind the goat house. It was one of approximately 30 brush fires reported in the District and nearby areas.

The National Gallery of Art was visited by approximately 25,000 persons between 2 and 5 p. m. Attendance at the Gallery has averaged 10,000 daily since it was opened to the public last Tuesday, officials said.

Police reported a large number of tourists, although the great influx will not come until about the middle of April, when the cherry blossoms are expected.

Nearby Maryland and Virginia fire companies reported they were kept on the run.

In Arlington County, Va., 15 brush fires were extinguished.

Henderson Sets Aluminum Scrap Prices

Restrictions Near On Secondary Iron, Steel, Zinc, He Says

Ceiling prices for aluminum scrap and secondary aluminum were fixed yesterday by Leon S. Henderson, price stabilization director of the National Defense Advisory Commission, to curb what he described as "serious inflationary pressures."

Soaring prices under stimulation of the Government need of aluminum for defense purposes made the price-fixing necessary, he said, warning:

"The price schedule will be fully enforced. The powers of the Government to place compulsory orders, to condemn or requisition properties, to issue priorities and to use other powers to carry out the defense program will be exerted to the utmost against any person whom we find to be disregarding these selling prices."

Similar restrictions are imminent for iron, steel and zinc scrap, Henderson said, charging that "appar-

Nye to Ask Taxes to Pay Aid Bill Now

Opponents Concede Overwhelming Vote For $7,000,000,000 In Senate Today

The tremendous additional appropriations that will be voted this week for the British and American armament efforts prompted a call last night for tax increases far greater than any anticipated by the Administration.

The defense and financial picture had these main facts:

Senator Nye (Republican, of North Dakota, conceding that the $7,000,000,000 aid-to-Britain appropriation bill will easily pass the Senate today, said he would demand, the Associated Press reported, that additional revenue of $3,500,000,000 for each of the next two years be provided to meet the cost.

In addition to the $7,000,000,000 measure, Congress was due to send to President Roosevelt shortly the $4,073,810,074 supplemental defense bill passed by the House on Friday, and the $3,415,521,750 naval supply bill for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Large Plurality Expected

The British aid bill, it appeared last night, will have only a dozen or 15 votes against it after Senate opposition forces briefly restate their position. The bill, in the same form that won House approval earlier, then can be flown to President Roosevelt, cruising in the Caribbean, for his signature, authorizing immediate use of the measure's provisions.

While Nye called for raising the $7,000,000,000 additional revenue in two years, Senator LaFollette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, said such an undertaking would involve taxes so heavy as to damage the Nation's economic structure.

Facing the need for extraordinary increases in tax revenue, the House Ways and Means Committee, headed by Representative Doughton, of North Carolina, plans to start an intensive study of tax revision needs and possibilities shortly after April 1. By that time Treasury experts will be able to give the committee more definite information as to the year's probable revenue total, based on the March 15 income tax returns.

Nye Foresees More Requests

As approved unanimously by the Senate Appropriations Committee Saturday, the aid bill would provide $1,343,000,000 for ordnance, $2,054,000,000 for aircraft, $362,000,000 for tanks and other vehicles, $629,000,000 for ships, $280,000,000 for miscellaneous equipment and supplies, $752,000,000 for plant expansion and facilities, $1,350,000,000 for purchasing farm and industrial commodities, $200,000 for repairing ships, $40,000,000 for unspecified purposes and $10,000,000 for administrative expense.

Nye said testimony received by the Senate committee in closed ses-

'Thumbs Up!' Cries Lady Astor To Raid-Harassed Plymouth

Free Meals Given To Weary Citizens Amid City's Ruins

By the Associated Press.

Plymouth, England, March 23.—Thousands of free meals were distributed today to residents of twice-blitzed Plymouth, some of whom took to the fields and hedges around the city last night after undergoing two straight nights of furious German raids.

The government was speeding rehabilitation work along with the food. Trucks equipped with loud speakers toured the city, telling weary townspeople where they could get food and offering financial aid.

With the coming of dawn, those who fled to the fields and hedges trekked back to the city and its ruins, and some were being removed to other nearby towns by trains and buses.

American-born Lady Astor, Mayoress of Plymouth, who has gone about the city in almost constant visits to bombed areas, told the townspeople in a local broadcast

Nazis Bomb Malta, Cripple British Cruiser

Luftwaffe Claims Sinking of 19,000 Tons In Two Days

By the Associated Press

Berlin, March 23.—Three air attacks in two days on Malta, Britain's mid-Mediterranean island base, and scattered new blows on British shipping from the north Atlantic to the eastern Mediterranean were reported by the Germans today.

Nazi dive bombers bore down on the Maltese harbor of Valletta today, blasted harbor facilities in a virtual spray of bombs and crippled a British cruiser and large passenger ship, German fliers said.

They claimed a hit with a bomb of the heaviest caliber on the bow of the cruiser and another blow with a heavy bomb on the merchantman's deck.

Attacking twice Saturday, the high command said, fighter-escorted Nazi combat groups scored hits on ships and antiaircraft positions.

The communique said seven British Hurricane fighters were shot down. Reports of today's raid said heavy antiaircraft fire was encountered but no British fighter planes appeared.

At least 19,000 tons of British shipping were claimed as sunk or damaged in widespread air operations over a two-day span.

German press dispatches said a 6,000-ton freighter was brought to a stop shrouded in smoke after a bomb hit amidships today near the Shetland Islands, off northeast Scotland.

Berlin Bombed; Diplomatic Quarters Hit

R. A. F. Destroys Nazi Barracks In French Port

By International News Service

Berlin (Monday), March 24.—British bombers last night and early today attacked Berlin and sections of northern Germany in a series of raids which were officially described as failing to achieve their objective.

The Reich capital was raided by strong forces of the Royal Air Force, it was announced. Some single British raiders managed to penetrate to the center of the city and drop incendiary and explosive bombs on the outskirts, killing or injuring an unannounced number of civilians.

(A German short wave broadcast picked up in New York stated that the diplomatic quarter in the heart of Berlin was showered by British incendiary bombs. Hitlers' chancellory is located in this quarter. The broadcaster also said that civilian communities on the outskirts of the capital were bombed with high explosive and incendiary bombs. Berlin's great war industry factories are located in suburbs of the city.)

Nazi Barracks Hit

London, March 23.—The R. A. F. rode the wind down the French Coast from Calais to Brittany today for a smashing attack on the port of Quiberon, close to the Nazi submarine base of Lorient, the government announced.

A communique said high explosives destroyed a German barrack block in the town, while another bomb was sent crashing into a German escort vessel—an antiaircraft

Hidden Armada Sets Aviation Reserve Record, Minister Says

By the Associated Press

London, March 23.—Britain announced today that huge four-motored bombers had landed in England from the United States and that vast, hidden stores of bombers and fighters were ready to take the air in the Battle of Britain.

Secreted in "storage houses distributed everywhere" are the greatest reserves of bombers and fighters in history, Lord Beaverbrook, minister of aircraft production, declared.

He called it a "record surpassing anything that has gone before, anything in the history of aviation," and added that "this applies to fighters and bombers alike. Both types have reached the highest total in our history."

Although the numbers of British planes are a closely guarded secret, the Sunday Chronicle proclaimed that Britain now is producing 3,200 of all types each month and that her production peak has not yet been reached.

Arrival of the first giant bombers from the United States with range enough to bring the remotest corners of German-dominated territory into the Royal Air Force's target area was disclosed in a communique from Lord Beaverbrook's Ministry.

Number Not Disclosed

It did not give the time or number of the arrivals but said the first to come were what the British call "liberators" — long-range, heavy bombers produced by the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation of San Diego, Calif.

These planes, with a power plant of four Pratt and Whitney engines which develop 1,200 horsepower at the take-off, are said to have a range of 3,000 miles—enough to bomb any point in Italy, Germany or Nazi occupied countries from R. A. F. bases in England. They are credited with a top speed of 335 miles an hour.

The air correspondent of the authoritative Press Association said from the announcement it "might be assumed that four-engined Boeing B 17s also are arriving in this country from America."

He added that he "understood 26 Consolidated Liberators are to be supplied to the R. A. F." and that it was "expected that six of these machines will be used as transport planes in which pilots who are fer-

Matsuoka Gets Quiet Welcome In Moscow

To See Molotoff Today Before Proceeding To Axis Capitals

By the Associated Press

Moscow, March 23.—Yosuke Matsuoka, Japan's foreign minister, arrived here today for a one-day stopover en route to Berlin and Rome to London and Washington, he would like to stay longer "to meet leaders here" on his return trip to Tokyo.

Matsuoka spoke at an interview in the Japanese Embassy three hours after receiving a courteous but unostentatious welcome to the Russian capital.

Some Japanese authorities suggested before his departure that he continue his trip from Berlin and Rome to London and Washington, Matsuoka said, but he added that "I do not have that in mind."

The Japanese minister said he had no definite itinerary or plans, but hoped his trip would not take more than six weeks. He related that the German and Italian foreign ministers, Joachim von Ribbentrop and Count Galeazzo Ciano, invited him by telephone to make the journey immediately after the signing of the three-power treaty last September 27.

"The tripartite pact is the greatest foreign instrument for Japan," Matsuoka said. "Japanese foreign policy will revolve around it as a

Regent Fails To Form Cabinet Willing to Yield To Nazi Demands

Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, March 23. — The rising storm of the Yugoslav people's resistance to Germany burst today in the provinces, where the peasants and villagers of central Serbia, Macedonia, Montenegro and Bosnia marched by thousands in demonstrations against the Yugoslav government's apparent determination to sign a pact with the Reich.

While wild rumors, set adrift in Belgrade and the provincial capitals, inflamed the public anxiety and indignation, Prince Regent Paul and Premier Dragisha Cvetkovitch redoubled their struggle to fill the three yawning holes in the cabinet and seize at least a technical authorization to come to terms with the increasingly impatient German leaders.

An agreement such as the Axis pact requires the unanimous support of the cabinet under Yugoslavia's constitution.

Fail to Agree

[Prince Paul's men, after hours of conference tonight, failed to complete a cabinet agreeable to capitulation to Adolf Hitler, the Associated Press reported.

[The lights and heat on a special train which was to carry Premier Dragisha Cvetkovitch and Foreign Minister Aleksander Cincar-Markovich to Vienna tomorrow were turned off just before midnight and a government spokesman said "there will be nothing tonight."

[The United Press said it was reported that British troops, moving swiftly across northern Greece, had reached the Yugoslav frontier along the Vardar Valley, historic route of invasion from the north.

[Some reports said that three divisions of mechanized troops—at least 35,000 men—were along Greeces' north borders with Yugoslavia and Bulgaria north of Salonika.

Greeks Give Warning

[Besides British troops, it was reported, colonials, Polish and Czecho-Slovak volunteers and contingents of "Free French" troops are holding the Greek frontier defenses, awaiting Hitler's next move.

[Besides German demands for a quick signing, Yugoslavia faced a Greek warning against any "hostile act," the Associated Press reported. Diplomatic quarters said Greece would thus interpret Yugoslavia's willingness to permit Germany to send sealed trains across the country with war materials, returning with wounded men. The Yugoslav-German pact provides for such permission, it has been reported.]

Tonight, like last night and the night before, German agents and journalists had circulated reports—duly received and dispatched abroad by news agencies—that the Yugoslav premier and other leaders would depart by special train at noon tomorrow for Vienna for the ceremony and signature of a modified tripatrite pact stripped of all military clauses.

Traced to German Source

A companion report, also traced in all save one case to a German source, had said that Cvetkovitch and Prince Paul late today persuaded the Serbian peasant cooperative leader, Voja Dkorgevitch, to accept the vacant post of minister of agriculture; that Dragomir Ikonitch, a ne'er-do-well politician formerly affiliated with opposition

Congress to Get Blueprints for Subway And Elevated Traffic Lanes in District

A blueprint for a system of high-speed elevated highways and motor subways will be presented to Congress next month in a Federal-District research report, The Post learned last night.

The study, ordered by Congress under last year's roads appropriation, is being made by a corps of 20 engineers under the direction of the District Highway Department and the Public Roads Administration.

Thomas H. MacDonald, commissioner of the PRA, revealed last night that the report would recommend a "major operation" as a solution to the District's traffic ills—"construction of free-flowing arteries, unimpeded by cross traffic, which will carry traffic around the east and west of the downtown area to the Mall."

MacDonald's disclosure followed a report by the streets and traffic subcommittee of the House District Committee, which pictured elevated highways and motor subways as "the only logical solution "to the city's transportation difficulties.

The subcommittee, headed by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, urged appointment of a special board of Federal and District officials to report to the House District Committee by June 30 on the relative merits of subways and elevated highways and possible locations.

MacDonald pointed out that no such board need be appointed.

"The study is already being made," he said, "and a report will soon be issued."

District Highways Director H. C. Whitehurst, who is supervising the technical study, said last night that a report could be expected sometime next month.

A score of engineers, he said, are measuring in great detail the flow of traffic through the city. An effort is being made to determine accurately the points and times of congestion as well as the origin and destination of the 150,000 cars which go downtown each day.

Meanwhile, Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee, announced that Shulte's report would come before the full committee for consideration next Monday. The committee meeting scheduled for today was canceled to permit a meeting of the national defense subcommittee.

"Representative Schulte has devoted much time and study to the traffic problem," Randolph said, "and his report will be given the most careful attention by the full committee."

Full details of the express artery system that will be recommended by the Federal-District survey could not be learned last night. MacDonald refused to discuss the

Rome Says British Warship Has Been Towed to U.S. Port

New York, March 23 (AP).—The Rome radio in a broadcast heard tonight by NBC said a 10,000-ton British destroyer named the London had been towed into the American port of Chester, "badly in need of repair" as a result of a clash with a German submarine. No other details were given.

(Janes Fighting Ships lists a 9,850-ton British warship London but classifies it as a cruiser.)

The Italian broadcast did not further identify the port of Chester, but there is a well-known shipbuilding center of that name near Philadephia.

Baltimore, March 23 (AP).—The Baltimore Sun said tonight it had been advised by a usually reliable authority that a "British heavy cruiser is heading for the Norfolk, Va., navy yard for repairs." The source, refusing to be quoted, said it was "possible the warship would arrive there tomorrow morning."

The naval attache at the British Embassy in Washington, Rear Admiral H. Pott, said that he knew of no British warship of any kind coming to this country for repairs "in the near future" and that he would have been advised if such action were planned.

At Philadelphia Commander D. D. Mercer, Admiralty attache of the British Consulate said the port of Chester "might easily refer" to Chester, Nova Scotia, instead of Chester, Pa.

Model's Son Dies, Second Victim Of Family Quarrel

Chicago, March 23 (AP).—Douglas Evans, the 2-year-old son of William and Nedra Evans, of suburban Berwyn, died today—the second victim of a domestic quarrel during which four persons were slashed with a hunting knife.

Police Chief Joseph Pilat, of Berwyn, said Evans, who is 25, told him that he stabbed his mother-in-law, Mrs. Ethel Sanders, 45, fatally, slashed his wife and child and then cut his own throat and stabbed himself in the abdomen yesterday.

The mother, 22, who was named last week as "the most beautiful brunette model" by a society of illustrators, told the police she had left her husband two weeks ago and planned to divorce him.

The condition of Mrs. Evans was reported as "satisfactory" at the hospital.

Italians Dig In For Defensive In Albania

By International News Service

Athens, March 23.—Italian troops were reported tonight to be digging in frantically along the entire Albanian battlefront in expectation of a Greek offensive.

The Athens radio asserted that the Fascist divisions which survived the crushing defeat of their recent offensive were shattered in morale, as well as so weakened numerically that they might give way quickly under a determined attack.

Intensive activity in strengthening lines has been observed in the Tepeleni area, the radio asserted. This desperately-defended key position already is one of the most strongly fortified bastions of the Italian front, thus any further strengthening was interpreted as an indication that Mussolini's legions were steeling themselves for defense.

Italian prisoners captured in the last 24 hours on this front were quoted as saying that Fascist officers are striving with might and main to brace up the morale of their battered troops.

Action today was confined to artillery activity by both sides and some small scale patrol action, Athens military sources revealed.

One Fascist patrol was captured en masse, another annihilated and the rest badly mauled by Greek machine-gun fire, it was claimed.

These sources revealed that a recent Italian propaganda stunt backfired with disastrous results to the Fascist troops.

Italian planes dropped leaflets in the Greek lines, urging the Greeks to throw down their arms and come over to the Italian lines where they would be paid 100 lire apiece.

These handbills happened to fall among troops from the Island of Crete, with a long-standing grudge against Italy. They came over to the Italian lines, as urged. But they came with fixed bayonets and when they returned to their own lines they took 1,140 Fascist prisoners with them, according to the story in Athens.

parties, had agreed to accept the social affairs and public welfare portfolio, and that Mihailo Konstantinovitch would withdraw his Friday's resignation and again become minister of justice.

An earlier report this afternoon which circulated when it was learned that Svetozar Ivkovitch had elected to remain as Croat vice governor and spurn the social affairs ministry said that Fran Kulovetz would shift from his ministry without portfolio to the ministry of justice and that Ivkovitch would take the social affairs position.

Prince Paul received Cvetkovitch for a three-hour conference beginning at noon today and the premier returned to the white palace again toward evening. Dkorgevitch, who was warned at a meeting of his party members this morning against the "political suicide" of joining a capitulation government, went again to the white palace tonight, where Prince Paul and Cvetkovitch renewed their entreaties.

Shout "Down With Hitler!"

In the meantime, in the provinces trouble was starting. At Kragujevach, the ancient capital of "Shumadija" (land of the forest)—old Serbia proper—angry peasants and townspeople began a demonstration against capitulation. Shouting "Down with Hitler!" and old Serbian battle cries, and singing some of the new anti-German songs, too lustily graphic to be printable, they marched around the village square in the bright sunlight.

The Kragujevach police, summoned to maintain order, made no attempt to break up the demonstration. There was no rioting.

An estimated 30,000 cheering and singing Bosnians met Branko Chubrilovitch—who resigned his post at the agriculture ministry Thursday night—at the railroad station at Benja Luke in Bosnia. Singing "Spremite se Komitadjis" (be ready, Komitadjis) the huge crowd swept about the delighted Bosnian leader, lifted him to broad peasant shoulders and carried him through the streets in a wildly enthusiastic demonstration which was not interfered with.

At Sisak, in Croatia, Croat terrorists exploded a charge of dynamite near a monument of King Peter I.

Several thousand South Serbians and Macedonians demonstrated at Skoplje, singing Macedonian revolutionary songs and shouting Serbian and Macedonian war cries. There was no rioting and no disorder.

In the historic Sanjak of Montenegro, 2,600 peasants staged a demonstration today in which they sang and shouted ancient battle cries from the days of the Montenegran-Turkish wars and wound up their day by dispatching a telegram warning Prince Paul that the peasants and towns people of Berane would revolt if Yugoslavia signed anything with Germany infringing Yugoslav independence.

Petitions Flood Palace

Other protest meetings, including a conclave of Sokol leaders at Belgrade, produced a series of telegrams and petitions which, with yesterday's flood of cables, radiograms, telegrams, letters and petitions, inundated clerks at the White Palace, the presidency and the foreign office.

London to Scrap Famous Tower

New York, March 23 (AP).—The British radio said today the North Tower, all that remains of London's famous Crystal Palace, swept by fire in 1936, is to be "blown up to provide valuable scrap metal for British munitions factories and also to deprive the enemy of a guide on his bombing expeditions."

The South Tower also survived the fire, but has alreday been demolished. Both towers contain more than 1,600 tons of cast iron, the radio said. The broadcast was heard here by N. B. C.

2 Nazis Returned to Canada, Broke INTO Cell to Get Out

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

BACK TO CANADA—Heinz Rottman (left) and Bernhard Gohlke, German naval officers who escaped from the Canadian internment camp at Fort Henry, Ontario, and sought to enter the United States by crossing the frozen St. Lawrence River, are shown handcuffed at the U. S. Immigration Office at Thousand Island Bridge, from which they were returned to Canadian authorities

By the Associated Press

Ottawa, March 23.—Two German naval officers who were intercepted midway across the frozen St. Lawrence River by the United States border patrol on an audacious and elaborately planned escape attempt were back in prison tonight at Old Fort Henry after being refused entry into the United States.

At the end of their frustrated flight it was disclosed that the pair had established a new record of some sort as escape artists, for they had to break into a locked cell to make their getaway.

The cell was sealed some time Friday when it was disclosed that a stone had been loosened with freedom aforethought. All the occupants were removed pending repairs.

Apparently the two broke into the locked cell Friday evening, removed the loosened stone and crawled out through the wall. Guards captured two accomplices in the cell before they could get away.

Patrol Hails Flight

Royal Canadian Mounted and Ontario provincial police and camp guards started a hot pursuit and were close behind when the men were apprehended just before midnight by the United States border patrol.

Officials emphasized that the Germans (identified in Washington by the Department of Justice as Bernhart Gohoke and Heinz Rottman) had not been arrested on a charge of entering the United States illegally.

"It was a case of knocking at the front door and asking to get in, and admission was refused," one official said. The procedure was compared, illustratively, with that involving Canadians traveling to the United States. Canadians are permitted to cross the border to the first United States immigration office, but if their papers are not in order they are returned to Canada.

Refused Admission

The Germans were refused admission after a hearing before United States immigration officials at Clayton, on the boundary, and were taken in custody by Canadian authorities.

Officials here said these Nazis were not in the same category as another German prisoner now free on bail in the United States. This man, who identified himself as Baron Franz von Werra, was arrested at Ogdensburg, N. Y., after entering the United States undetected. He faces a charge of illegal entry.

The short-lived break of the navy pair raised to 33 the number of war prisoner breakouts in Canada. All but two, Von Werra and Ernst Nueller, who was shot dead resisting capture in northwestern Ontario, are back in Canadian custody.

Lord Beaverbrook, speaking to the nation by radio, disclosed these technical gains in aviation:

1. In the race for altitude, British scientists have "watched Hurricane and Spitfire (fighters) being lifted up and up until now these airplanes ride high, wide and handsome."

2. Two new planes "at this moment are passing from the development stage to production," and behind these are several other new types.

3. Five new motors "have been brought from experiment to manufacture in nine months."

Air observers said variable flying weather over northwest Europe might impose a serious check on the German bid to back submarine and surface raids on shipping with "blit" raids on Britain's ports.

"The timing of the first blow by the Luftwaffe in support of the navy followed careful planning by the German High Command," one observer said.

"When the hour struck early this month, squadrons in Western Europe were thrown into battle again. They were refreshed by lulls in night bombing on both sides owing to abominable weather as winter drew to a close.

"Formations of anything from 200 to 500 strong have been sent out nightly to make sure that American aid to Britain which slipped by pocket battleships, U-boats and long-range bombers should be upset before it was unpacked (by attacks on ports).

"This end must be achieved before—through wastage and weariness—the fury of the offensive is spent."

Both Lord Beaverbrook and a fellow cabinet member, Board of Trade President Oliver Lyttleton, stressed the value of United States aid and both touched on what is to come after the war.

The United States' provision of arms and planes for Britain, Lyttleton told an Aldershot audience, "is the most generous gesture that has ever been made."

He asked whether the British "Should have found it in our hearts to give her the help she is now giving us within such a short time" if the United States became involved in a war and answered, "I do not think so."

Of the world after this war, Lyttleton said no nation or alliance of nations could "engage upon any raids upon their neighbors" or disturb world peace "if they were faced by the great mass of English speaking people mated."

Lord Beaverbrook said close collaboration between the United States and Britain was the "crowning good" made possible by the war.

He credited Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt, Canadian Prime Minister W. L. MacKenzie King and the resistance of the British people with having brought it about.

A blessing of the war, he said, was "hope that when victory is won we shall enjoy a union of interest and purpose between two sundered fragments of the Anglo-Saxon race.

"Such a mighty concentration of power and influence will subdue the proud and hold in check the wicked, will secure peace in their occupation to men of good will."

The aircraft production minister named only one of the new types of engines—the Sabre—and said that G. P. Bulman, for many years in charge of engine production in the air and aircraft production ministries, was largely responsible for it.

The Sabre has been disclosed to have the highest power output of any British type which has passed official trials. It also has an extremely small frontal area.

Meanwhile millions of Britons joined today at the behest of King George VI in an empire day of prayer for divine favor in the battle of the Atlantic.

Special services were held in churches in Britain throughout the empire. King George, in the uniform of a field marshal, took Queen Elizabeth and their two daughters to worship in a small country church.

Chaplains in the army, navy and airforce directed observances by Britain's fighting men in barracks and air stations and aboard ships and the British Broadcasting Corporation broadcast sermons and prayer by Arthur Cardinal Hinsley and the Archbishop of Canterbury.

300 Guns Roar In Bitter Duel At Cheren

By a Times of London Correspondent
Copyright by New York Times

Before Cheren in Eritrea, March 23.—Three hundred British and Italian guns are pumping shells into each other across the gorges of the Eritrean escarpment, 4 miles outside of Cheren.

At dawn Thursday the thunderous noise of these guns reechoed from peak to peak, while an unending stream of missiles pounded the mountainside and flung dust and flame along the valleys.

I was moving up with a convoy of ammunition, water and hot food for the troops, who were grimly holding the heights overlooking Cheren. The moon had disappeared behind the hills and as yet the day was lit by only a faint red streak.

Our lorry drivers drove almost by instinct, feeling their way along the road except when the flares of bursting shells lit up the route ahead.

As burst after burst dropped round us, the scene came to life in a series of ruddy flashes—ditches by the roadside filled with weary infantrymen snatching sleep while the barrage lasted, and silhouetted against the flame were lines of prisoners with steel-helmeted Indian guards at their head as they marched down the road from their camp.

Hellfire Corner

As the red dawn suffused the gorge our convoy approached the last bend in the road before battle headquarters and the drivers who had been joking and laughing a few minutes before suddenly went silent—not for nothing has this bend been called "hellfire corner."

Two of the Italian batteries are, by now, experts in scoring direct hits. They wait for the dust of an approaching car and then fire—and any car taking the bend at 25 miles an hour or less does not complete its journey. That is why our cars rushed and screamed around the bend at 50 miles per hour, taking their chance at being hit by splinters from shells exploding on the hard macadam. Up to now there have been no casualties.

We put up our thumbs to each other, and began to talk again, because the barrage had died down to the accompaniment of the faint stutter of machine guns as the infantrymen up there on the mountainsides pushed on across the appalling terrain a few yards further toward their goal.

Fascists Lose Heavily

I witnessed the pounding of Italian positions around the town. Farther up the road I met the colonel who is now in charge of the brigade headquarters against which Alpine troops launched a heavy counterattack two nights ago. He defended the headquarters by mobilizing clerks and kitchen hands to repel the invaders with revolvers and bayonets. The Italians suffered heavy casualties.

Troops led by Lieut. Gen. William Platt, who commands the Sudan front, still hold Fort Dologorodoc, where a Midland regiment went through a terrific bombardment. But their guns put several Italian batteries out of action—the score was more than equalized.

There is now little doubt that the Italian forces, who are retreating everywhere else, have chosen Cheren as a position from which to make a desperate stand. Forty thousand defenders, including Savoy Grenadiers, Carabinieri and Alpini, have lost cruelly. A thousand prisoners are now in British hands and there are many hundreds of white men among them. They say the Italians have lost more men, wounded and dead, than in any other campaign in which they have taken part. Every gorge is strewn with bodies.

Prisoners also say that the Italians have rushed in every gun they have, including ancient pieces built by the Austrians in 1870.

News reached here today of the progress of British and "Free French" units, including detachments of the Foreign Legion, fighting north of Cheren. They are heavily engaging the Italians on a 7,000-foot peak seven miles north of Cheren.

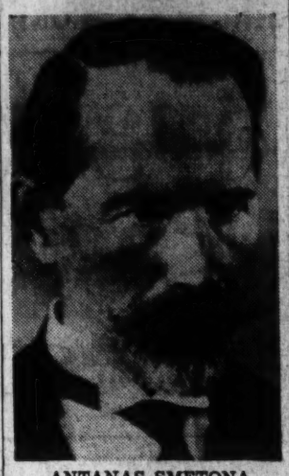
Chinese Seek To Connect Burma, Yunnan by Rail

Chungking, March 23 (AP).—The official Chinese Central News announced today that Tu Chen-Yuan, head of the engineering bureau, will leave soon for the United States to negotiate with manufacturers and Washington authorities for purchase of supplies and materials to build a new railway connecting Burma with China's southwestern province of Yunnan.

The projected railway would afford a more efficient system of transportation than the present Burma Highway by which China is now importing most of her war supplies.

The Chinese press reported yesterday that B. S. Fong, of San Francisco, would attempt to raise $10,000,000 in America to build the railway.

Lithuania Will Not Die, Says Ex-Ruler Here



ANTANAS SMETONA

Antanas Smetona, a slight college professor with a beard, who ruled Lithuania as dictator-president for 13 years, arrived in Washington last night to write his memoirs.

But he does not expect to finish them. A fierce nationalist who spent several terms in Czarist prisons, Smetona is sure the call will come again to rule his tiny native land.

"Faith," he said, after stepping from the New York train at Union Station, "is a great power. I am convinced that Lithuania will again be free."

His arrival with his wife after flight across Germany, Switzerland, France, Spain, Portugal and the Atlantic Ocean, brought out a large section of Washington's Lithuanians.

Almost 100 members of the American-Lithuanian Society, led by President Albert Shupienis, surrounded him on the platform, and Secretary Nellie Kizevich presented Mrs. Smetona with a bouquet of red roses.

Former Senator King, of Utah, shook the hand of the refugee statesman and smiled. "Welcome to our country."

On hand, too, was the envoy of another Baltic buffer state, Latvian Minister Dr. Alfred Bilmanis, whose country, like Smetona's, "was swallowed by the Soviet Union last summer. The Lithuanian Minister, Povilas Zadeikis, met the train at Baltimore and accompanied him to Washington.

The Baltic ruler, who seized power in 1926 under the pretext of a Communist threat, only to lose it in 1940 during an actual Soviet invasion, said that Lithuanian national fervor is stronger than ever today.

"Resistance within Lithuania continues," he said, "and it will continue until our country is free."

A lawyer, journalist and professor of philosophy and economics, Smetona led the Lithuanian nationalist movement from 1905 to 1918, when the republic was declared. His country's first President, he resigned after several years to exercise power in the background unthe bloodless coup d'etat in 1926.

Last June, he stepped over the frontier into Germany a few hours after Russian troops entered his country. His wife, son, daughter-in-law and two grandchildren were held up at the border, but finally released, and the whole family was interned in East Prussia.

The Soviet government demanded that he be handed over, but the Nazis refused and permitted him to obtain a visa for the United States. With his family he sailed from Lisbon for Rio de Janeiro, then proceeded by ship to New York, where his daughter and son-in-law, who had proceeded more directly, awaited him.

He will make his home at the legation here.

British Take Town in Push ToAddis Ababa

By the Associated Press

Cairo, March 23.—British forces driving north to Addis Ababa from Kenya Colony and Italian Somaliland have captured the strategically important southern Ethiopian town of Negheili, a communique announced today.

Planes of the R. A. F. and the South African Air Force raided other Ethiopian towns, bombed and machine-gunned trains on the Addis Ababa-Djibuti Railway, destroying at last one, and pounded at the Marda Pass defenses in the Jijiga area south of the railway.

The communique also reported local successes in Eritrea, where the British have besieged the railroad town of Cheren, barring the road to Asmara, the capital. Two Italian planes were shot down near Cheren.

"Negheili, capital of Galla Borana Province, was only a stockaded village in January, 1936, when Marshal Rodolfo Graziani's "hell on wheels" column drove into it. The Italians hailed it as a mighty victory, pointing out that the capture gave them control of all water holes within 250 miles of Dolo.

(Premier Mussolini sent Graziani his personal congratulations. The town lies about 240 miles from Addis Abeba and has an important air field.)

In the area of Jijiga, which the British captured last week, a fresh drive was going on toward Harar, provincial walled capital.

Nazis Practice At Invasion, Sweden Hears

By Bernard Valery

Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, March 23.—A full-dress invasion—of England—rehearsal was recently carried out by the German army with the cooperation of the navy and air force on the Isl and of Rugen in the Baltic Sea, in the presence of Field Marshal Walther von Reichenau and Field Marshal Gunther von Kluge, reports the Berlin correspondent of the pro-German newspaper Aftonbladet.

"The strategical task of the participating units was to attack frotm the sea the cliffs of Rugen and to effect a subsequent landing with as little los as possible of a large number of troops," the correspondent writes.

It is no accident that both field marshals chose Rugen Island for these maneuvers. It was due to the well known fact that Rugen's cliffs are remarkably like the English Channel coast.

This correspondent says further that Berlin's military circles declared that maneuvers permitted many interesting observations and although their detail was impossible to obtain, two factors played apparently a dominant role—namely, the use of a multitude of small fast boats and of a new artificial fog.

"There is the question of the entirely new type of artificial fog which is now being experimented with by the Farben Industry and is, for the moment, called 'hydro-cn.' Within a few minutes it is possible to lay an enormous fog-screen, under the protection of which soldiers and boats can operate."

The correspondent goes on to say that the new artificial fog is superior to anything the Germans have used up to now. It is much cheaper to manufacture and is not dangerous to inhale.

He further points out both of the Nazi field marshals are commanding German troops located along the coasts of Holland, Belgium and France.

Observers in Stockholm, while admitting the maneuvers could have taken place, are inclined to believe this dispatch, from a correspondent who is regarded here as a mouthpiece of the Wilhelmstrasse, might well be a fresh German contribution to the war of nerves and fabricated to impress Sweden and other more or less neutrals, such as Yugoslavia and Turkey.

Nazis Raid Malta, Cripple Cruiser

Sea, the war bulletin said, a 3,000-ton freighter was struck amidships and sunk. Another, of unstated tonnage, was listed as severely damaged by air attack east of Orford Ness. The communique also said "minesweepers off the British south coast were successfully attacked" and the Scottish port of Peterhead and English port of Colchester were raided.

"At sea south of Crete," it added, "German combat planes engaged a strongly protected convoy. Planes scored two hits amidships on one vessel of 6,000 tons whereupon the ship stopped and burst into flames.

"Two further ships in this convoy were damaged. A merchantman of 5,000 tons southwest of Cyprus was so severely damaged by German planes that her loss is counted upon."

Many of the 22 ships which the High Command said yesterday were sunk by German battleships in the Atlantic were reported by D. N. B., official German news agency, to have been loaded with "extremely valuable war material."

Quoting survivors, D. N. B. said much of the war material consisted of airplane parts and munitions.

The German warships prowled the Atlantic for many days expecting battle with heavy British naval units, according to a sailor's short description of the attack released by the government.

When five ships from Canada were sighted, the sailor said, one of the freighters broadcast the radio signal "R" three times.

This, the account continued, stood for "raiders," and under German sea war regulations the use of the radio in these circumstances makes the ship subject to immediate destruction.

The sailor said British forces were nearby at the time.

Mexican Predicts Friction With U.S. Will End Soon

Copyright by New York Times

New York, March 23.—Within the next few months most of the sources of friction between the United States and Mexico will disappear, it was predicted today by Rafael de la Colina, Mexican consul general in New York City.

Colina made his optimistic forecast in an address before several hundred members of Pan-American groups at a meeting and concert formally opening Inter-American Cooperation Week, sponsored by the Committee for Inter-American Cooperation.

A message from President Manuel Avila Camacho of Mexico indorsing the movement for "tightening the bonds of solidarity among the peoples of the American continent," was read, as was a message of greeting from Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt.

"The promotion of closer cultural, economic and political relations between the people of the Western Hemisphere," President Avila Camacho said, "is equivalent to preparing the ground for decisions affecting the common defense of the democratic ideal, mutual respect for the sovereignty of the peoples and continental security."

May Declare War on U. S., Italy Warns

By the United Press

Rome, March 23.—Premier Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo d'Italia of Milan, warned today that President Roosevelt may provoke the Axis into seizing the initiative and declaring war against the United States, particularly if American warships are used for convoys.

The newspaper asserted, on the twenty-second anniversary of the birth of fascism, that Mr. Roosevelt was trying to goad Italy and Germany into declaring war because he hoped to "become emperor of the world."

"It is possible that the Axis might accept the provocation," said Il Duce's newspaper.

"He Wants It Declared"

"Roosevelt leaves no doubt that he fully desires to participate in the war but he wants it declared against the United States . . . If the President decides to send supplies to England convoyed by United States warships the incident which Roosevelt seeks might easily occur."

The President is hamstrung in his desire to declare war, the article continued, because "United States public opinion is contrary to direct participation in the conflict."

"If Roosevelt should take off his mask and upon his own decision enter the war then he would not docilely be followed by his people."

Giovanni Ansaldo, editor of Foreign Minister Ciano's newspaper, Il Telegrafo of Leghorn, in a broadcast to the Italian armed forces assured them that there was no cause for alarm in the United States' militant attitude toward the Axis.

Contrast With Wilson

After discussing the war in Africa and stating that the nip-and-tuck struggle around Cheren in Eritrea has "given the Italian East African command time to organize other defense positions," Ansaldo said:

"As far as the United States' current attitude is concerned it must be pointed out that whereas Woodrow Wilson in the last war spoke of lofty ideals of justice, Roosevelt, who is imposing his war policy upon the United States, does not speak of justice.

"Therefore the Anglo-Saxons aim at victory so as to be able to exploit all the defeated nations and dominate the world.

"Today Italy, Germany and Japan represent all the oppressed peoples—they represent the Negroes, Indians and emigrants who have given their blood for Anglo-Saxon power. Italy, Germany and Japan must win this war because they want a just and equitable new order based according to the needs of all nations, small, large, rich and poor."

Virginio Gayda wrote in the Voce d'Italia today that the British offensive in North Africa led by Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell had been halted because part of his troops had been rushed to Greece and the Sudan.

Truce Ends Aircraft Die Plant Strike

(A. F. L.) before it can become effective.

Chief points agreed upon at the Harvill negotiations, the Associated Press said, were union recognition; an open shop clause; no discrimination against union members.

Others set the contract, when signed, at a year's duration and covered seniority grievance handling and similar technical problems.

Recognition was one of the union's demands, but the chief point at issue was a requested wage increase from a minimum of 50 cents to a minimum of 75 cents hourly.

The International Harvester works have been tied up for three weeks by a C. I. O. strike over union recognition and wage demands. However, the A. F. of L. claims 4,000 members among the workers.

C. I. O. President Philip Murray, meantime, conferred with United Automobile Workers' officials in connection with the two months' strike at the Milwaukee plant of the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co. Government orders totaling $45,000,000 have been stalemated.

William Green, president of the A. F. L., promised a statement "soon" in reply to the appeal of Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, issued Saturday, for organized labor to condemn the practice of charging "exorbitant" initiation fees to workers seeking defense jobs.

Norris made the plea in simultaneous letters to Green and Philip Murray, head of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and incorporated a warning to both that unless this practice ceased, a hostile public opinion might inspire enactment of repressive new laws which would injure the rights of all labor.

Murray promptly responded that the "exorbitant initiation fee racket must be laid at the door of the American Federation of Labor," and challenged the Nebraskan to cite one such instance involving the C. I. O.

British Develop Synthetic Textile

New York, March 23 (AP).—British chemists are developing a synthetic textile from seaweed.

The new textile can be produced more cheaply than viscose rayon, said an article in Industrial and Engineering Chemistry, publication of the American Chemical Society. It was expected that the new textile would be used to augment England's supply of clothing.

"It is hoped that by reducing the demand on shipping space this new textile will play its part in connection with the war," the article said.

The textile was said to be non-irritating, nonflammable and to absorb water as readily as wool.

Chiang Awaiting U. S. Planes To Launch Counteroffensive

By F. Tillman Durdin.

Copyright by New York Times

Chungking, China, March 23.—China awaits American planes to launch a major counteroffensive against the Japanese forces, Gen. Chiang Kai-shek said in an interview here yesterday.

"I am satisfied with our military position," the general said. "We have scored a series of successes in recent months and now our forces are organized and ready for a major drive. If we can get American airplanes we will be able to strike."

When asked how Americans could best help China the general replied:

"President Roosevelt has laid down a policy of the greatest possible American aid to the countries fighting against aggression. Americans can best help China by unitedly putting forth their utmost efforts toward realization of this policy. Success of Mr. Roosevelt's policy will greatly assist China to win the final victory."

Question of Discipline

Chiang commented at length on his dispute with the Communists.

"The Communist question is one of discipline. The government wants to consider the Communists' armies as part of the national forces, the same as any other units, but they are demanding a special independent position and have not listened to orders.

"The Communists have made use of the foreign press and many people abroad do not get a realistic picture of the situation here. Many seem to think we should tolerate the Communists because of fear that because of trouble with the Communists we would be unable to continue resistance to Japan.

"The Communists will not be able to retard our resistance to Japanese aggression. In numbers and equipment they are weak and it would be to their detriment to do so; therefore they will not. The Communist armies are only 2 per cent of our whole armed forces."

"Nothing to Worry About"

At this point the general stopped and smiled.

"There is really nothing to worry about in this situation," he went on. "Don't worry; everything will be all right."

Then, seemingly still concerned with the American reaction to China's recent internal strife, he continued:

"Chinese public opinion has unanimously come to see that the Communists are in the wrong. I hope the American people will also see the real situation.

"There should be no confusion on question of who has retarded our resistance, of which side is wrong. I think President Roosevelt understands the situation and expressed his understanding when he said the United States would continue to aid the government of China."

ship—near Brest.

Two of the bombs which hit the barracks exploded simultaneously, the Air Ministry News Service said, and with such terrific force that a British plane 1,000 feet above was shaken.

The British skimmed the coast at such low altitude that they could see French fishermen and people on the beaches look up and wave "cheeringly" as they recognized the British markings.

There was some aerial activity over Britain itself, and an official announcement said "two enemy bombers" were destroyed, one by antiaircraft fire in north Scotland, the other by R. A. F. fighters in south England.

Another raider crashed in flames near Arundel, south England. Two crewmen were imprisoned.

Some homes on the south coast were damaged by bombs in the evening when four raiders tried to cross the coast.

German guns fired across Dover Strait at irregular intervals this afternoon and evening for the first time in several weeks. No casualties were reported.

$287,000,000 Defense Road Bill Expected

By the Associated Press

Congressional leaders said yesterday they expected President Roosevelt to send to Congress soon a $287,000,000 defense highway program.

Representative Cartwright (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairman of the House Roads Committee, said the bulk of the program would be designed to provide access to new Army training grounds, powder factories and other defense establishments.

A substantial part of the money, Cartwright said, would be earmarked for the repair of State highways damaged during troop maneuvers.

The Oklahoman explained that the program was distinct from the regular Federal-aid highway work for which Congress last year provided $327,000,000 for expenditure over a two-year period.

None of the money, he said, would be for so-called superhighways.

"Superhighways are all right in their place," he asserted, "but they should be built through bond issues and financed with tolls like Pennsylvania is doing with its new turnpike."

The legislator said some "regional" highways might be undertaken under the program if they were definitely linked to defense needs. Specifically, he said a new road from Washington to Baltimore would be one "for consideration."

Refusal to Buy Beef Dismays Argentines

By Arnaldo Cortesi

Copyright by New York Times

Buenos Aires, March 23.—La Prensa, one of the two leading Buenos Aires morning dailies, today voices the disappointment of Argentine peoples over Washington's failure to authorize the purchase of Argentine meats for the American Navy.

It points out that the quantity of meat involved was not large and that an increased commercial exchange between the United States and Argentina would benefit both countries. If the United States Senate decides to reverse its policy where Argentine meat is concerned, says La Prensa, "the first step will have been taken toward bringing about a better understanding, and which should not be further delayed, among the principal nations of North and South America."

Other Argentine newspapers are stronger in their comments, some saying that the Senate action justifies doubts as to the sincerity of President Roosevelt's good neighbor policy.

How great is Argentina's need of markets is shown by recently published figures giving the exportable surpluses of agricultural products. There are 4,346,000 tons of unexported wheat, 1,343,000 tons of unexported flaxseed and 6,410,000 tons of unexported corn in this country now. The government budget already faces the prospect of a deficit approaching 400,000,000 pesos in the current year.

The unsatisfactory state of the Argentine balance of international payments is the main theme of the annual report of the Central Bank. It points out that goods which the Argentine imports now cost approximately 33 per cent more than before the war, whereas Argentina is selling her products at about 4 per cent less.

The situation has been rendered worse by the fact that trade with the majority of European countries has been completely interrupted with the result Argentina no longer can sell to them. On the other hand, she cannot do without all the products she formerly bought from them, and she, therefore, has been obliged to increase her purchases from other countries, chiefly from the United States.

As a consequence of this situation the Central Bank states that the Argentine has accumulated considerable surpluses in trade with countries using blocked currencies but has a heavy deficit with countries using free currencies. In the case of England, an attempt will be made to utilize the surplus for the retirement of part of the Argentine debt held abroad or else for the purchase of British-owned Argentine railroads, since the British government rejected Argentine's request that the surplus should be transferred to the United States and used for financing Argentine purchases there.

New Red Cross Class

A new Red Cross nutrition class will be organized the first week in April, it was announced yesterday. The maximum enrollment will be 30 students. Save Power Or Be Crippled, U.S. Is Warned Widespread steps have been taken to protect the Nation's power supply from sabotage, but "careful planning" is needed to prevent crippling shortages of electricity, the Federal Power Commission reported last night.

With World War restrictions on use of electricity, such as lightless nights and skip-stop streetcar services, fresh in the minds of many, the commission stressed the problem it is facing in meeting unprecedented demands from expansion of defense production.

The problem was emphasized further as the Commerce Department reported construction of new factories in the first quarter of 1941 had exceeded construction in any corresponding period in the Nation's history.

Lowell J. Chawner, department economist estimated that if the present rate continued the year's expenditures for plant and equipment would total $3,000,000,000. This would compare with $2,300,000,000 last year, $2,100,000,000 in 1929, $2,300,000,000 in the peak year of 1920 and $3,500,000,000 during the war effort of 1918.

A potential defense threat was pictured by the Power Commission, also, in the "rapid depletion" of natural gas reserves. It questioned the advisability of permitting construction of a pipeline from south Texas to New York City, which would "tap Southwestern reserves of natural gas to supply the tremendous markets available in the Northeastern States."

Conclusions of the commission are of interest in connection with the proposal to pipe natural gas to the District of Columbia from West Virginia.

The gas reserves are sufficient for only 27½ years at present rate of consumption, the report states, adding:

"In view of the tremendous importance of petroleum products in both peace and war, it would be a grave mistake to allow the quest for quick profits and temporary convenience to cut into our available petroleum supplies.

Three Revisions Asked

The commission recommended three changes in the Natural Gas Act. The major revision would give the agency control over all new interstate natural-gas pipeline construction and prohibit construction of new lines until permission had been granted by the commission.

The other proposed changes would extend to natural gas the commission's regulatory authority, which it now exercises over electric utilities, to safeguard against "unjust and discriminatory rates," and would allow the regulatory body to compile and publish statistics of the natural-gas and manufactured-gas industries.

Regarding its work in national defense, the commission said it has succeeded in standardizing sizes, steam pressures and voltages of steam-turbine generators among the different manufacturers. Standardization, the commission noted, speeds up manufacture of such equipment.

With the exception of possible "bottlenecks" in certain areas, the report said, demands for power could be met with existing facilities and those under construction. It stated that the full effects of the defense program would not be felt in most areas until 1942, when the aggregate deficiencies in generating capacity in certain areas probably would exceed 1,500,000 kilowatts.

Dr. Lorwin Assails Plan To Draft Youth

Legislation to require a year's service in the national defense by American youth—either in the armed forces or behind the lines—was opposed yesterday by Dr. Lewis L. Lorwin, economist.

In a report compiled for the American Youth Commission, a branch of the American Council of Education, the former Brookings Institution staff member declared:

"The acceptance of the proposal for a one-year program, involving very large expenditures for the blanket employment of youth of one particular age, might very well result in diminution of other current youth work programs."

In addition, he said, exclusive reliance on the defense aspects of the problem might result in the neglect of the underlying needs of youth to prepare for peace. "Great as the immediate emergency is," he said, "it is necessary to continue to plan youth work programs on a more general basis.

"The needs of defense should be integrated with considerations of peacetime problems and responsibilities."

Dr. Lorwin urged expansion and revision of existing public work programs for youth. He said the programs should be geared to the needs of national defense.

Soldiers Test Gas Masks Under Exertion

sions led him to conclude that this fund was only one of several that might be requested by the President under authority of the lend-lease law.

"These estimates," he told reporters, "are based entirely on British needs and do not take into account material that may be furnished to Greece, China or any other countries.

"I have no doubt that there will be additional requests for funds as this program of underwriting conflict all over the world unfolds."

Two other money bills slated for Congressional consideration this week are the $101,000,000 first deficiency bill and the supply bill for fiscal 1942 civil functions of the War Department, expected to be about $195,000,000. The deficiency measure, now in conference, contains funds for expansion of electrical generating capacity at several places to aid defense industries, and employment of several hundred additional G-Men by the Federal Bureau of Investigation to handle defense cases.

The House, meanwhile, will discuss the bill to direct the Commodity Exchange Corporation to continue the storage of most Government-owned or Government-controlled cotton in inland warehouses, and another measure proposing to make the Office of Government Reports permanent.

In the committee hearings, Lowell Mellett, one of the President's administrative assistants and director of OGR, testified that there was no intention of the Government to start any form of censorship of the press or of radio, although the opposition directed its fire at reports that the blueprints of such a censorship had been drawn in this agency.

Ruth Egoscue To Be Examined By Psychiatrist

A psychiatrist today will examine 22-year-old Ruth Egoscue, pretty War Department clerk who disappeared for 60 hours last week and was found unconscious in Lincoln Park Friday night.

Dr. John Reed, in charge of the medical staff at Casualty Hospital, where the girl is recovering from shock, said last night that a thorough medical examination showed her to be in good physical condition. It was revealed, however, that she had suffered two nervous breakdowns in the past, one last fall when she similarly vanished from home for two days.

Miss Egoscue, who lives at 1706 Nineteenth Street Northwest, told Dr. Reed she was unable to remember what had occurred during the period of her absence.

Marshall Lauds Red Cross Work in Army

The American Red Cross yesterday was commended by Gen. George C. Marshall, United States Army chief of staff, as playing a vital part in maintaining Army morale, in serving as the connecting link between the civilian military forces and the "folks back home." He spoke on an N. B. C. network.

Addressing workers in the 3,700 Red Cross chapters, Gen. Marshall said: "You are helping to maintain morale on the home front and on the military front; you are helping us in training for defense."

To the 271 social-medical workers stationed in military stations and service hospitals, he said, "You are the medium through which officers in command of troops and soldiers receive the assistance that Red Cross chapters back home are obligated to render soldiers and their families confronted with emergencies; yours is a great responsibility."

Pointing out that anxiety and fear hinder the making of a good soldier, Gen. Marshall said that the War Department "attaches the value of the Red Cross as a link between the soldier and his home, when it wrote into Army regulations the services the organization undertakes."

He spoke at the opening broadcast of "Frontlines of Mercy," a 13-week series on National defense being sponsored by the Red Cross.

Cadet Schools Plan Defense Program Here

Integration of the Nation's military academies in the defense program will be given at a conference of military college and school executives opening today in the Mayflower Hotel.

Meeting with representatives of the Army, delegates will discuss methods of modernizing military training and raising academic standards of military schools.

More than 10,000 cadets are reported to be enrolled in 66 schools which are members of the Association of Military Colleges and Schools of the United States. All 46 are certified by the War Department as "essentially military," and Army officers are stationed at each academy to supervise instruction.

Enrollment showed a sharp decrease last fall at most schools, according to delegates who arrived yesterday, and a further increase is expected next fall. Graduates of the academies are ligible for commissions in the Army corps when they reach 21. The school directors report that they have been deluged with letters in recent months from graduates, asking how their qualifications be reported to the War Department.

Col. E. J. Jackson, president of the association, will open the convention at 9 a.m. today. Lieut. Col. W. A. Burress, Lieut. Col. J. W. Curtis and Lieut. Col. Henry J. Matchett will talk. Brig. Gen. John H. Hester, Brig. Gen. A. L. Singleton and Lloyd Lehrbas, Associated Press staff writer, are expected to speak this afternoon.

A general discussion is scheduled for the dinner tonight. Meetings will continue through Wednesday.

Miami U. Reunion

Commemorating the 132d anniversary of the founding of Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, alma mater of former President Benjamin Harrison, alumni from Washington and vicinity will hold a dinner reunion next Monday at the Farrar Tea Room, 1701 Twentieth Street Northwest.

Debate Rages Over Hoover On Air Forum

Rex Stout, the author, declared last night that Hitler had hypnotized Herbert Hoover in the belief that food can be sent to Nazi-overrun countries "and no Nazi bully will be stopped by it."

The bearded writer of popular novels thus precipitated an acrimonious argument between himself and George R. Sokolsky, New York Sun columnist and magazine writer, during their appearance on Theodore Granik's "American Forum of the Air," broadcast from the Willard Hotel.

Sokolsky accused Stout of making "a vicious and in my opinion unfair attack on Herbert Hoover." His voice rose as he went on to charge Stout with bringing out "old facts" against feeding starving Belgians "other than that Hoover proposed it."

After several unsuccessful attempts to cut in, Stout demanded, "Is this your radio, or ours, Mr. Sokolsky?"

Against Murder

"I'm against murder," boomed Sokolsky. "Direct or indirect murder. Murder by Hitler or murder by apathy."

"You're just like Cal Coolidge's preacher," retorted Stout. "He was against sin."

Stout accused Sokolsky of favoring aid neither to England nor Germany, and Sokolsky declared: "You have never in your life read a word that I wrote about Germany."

"Many words, many words," said Stout.

"That's untrue, that's untrue," shouted Sokolsky. "You can't pull tricks like that on me."

"Mr. Sokolsky," said Stout, finally, "are you debating or calling hogs?"

Cause for the heated exchange (they shook hands after the broadcast) was Stout's statement that "apparently one of Hitler's greatest triumphs is his successful and complete hypnosis of Herbert Hoover."

Advantage to Germany

He added: "The most impelling reason why Britain declines to open the blockade for shipment of food is the overwhelming evidence accumulated during the past 20 years that in the last war the food sent to Belgium was of enormous advantage to Germany. That is a known fact—and Mr. Hoover still denies it. He must be, I suppose, hypnotized."

Stout recalled how Hoover broke up the 1932 bonus march on Washington of "a horde of hungry and homeless Americans" and pictured "the shrinking of the hungry and ragged Americans that terrible winter of 1933, when President Hoover opposed, to the bitter end, one cent of Federal funds to feed them."

"But now," he said, "this same Hoover's heart is torn for the hungry across the seas. . . . Perhaps he can see hungry people only when they are a long way off."

Sokolsky pleaded for "the most meager of experiments"—merely an opportunity to "try" to feed starving residents of German-occupied countries.

"We may fail, but at any rate we ought to try," he said.

Colonization as Weapon

Under the plan of Herbert Hoover's National Committee on Food for the Small Democracies, of which he is a member, "there would be no greater supply on hand than would last 24 hours," Sokolsky said.

"If the Germans wished to seize this supply," he said, "all he would get would be enough for 24 hours, and all the world would know that we tried to save innocent lives and failed." Distribution would be supervised at first hand by the committee's representatives.

"The only argument against (this plan) thus far is that to undo the brutalities of Hitler it is necessary to be as brutal as Hitler," said Sokolsky. . . . We plead compassion as a practical measure in wartime."

Sokolsky was supported in the debate by Senator Ed C. Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, and Stout by Dr. William Agar, Columbia University scientist. The forum was broadcast over WOL and a C. B. S. network.

Lady Astor Cheers Weary Plymouth

tims suffered," Lady Astor said. "At least we have not been driven out of our country. Our sailors, our soldiers and our airmen will see we never are. We must not waver. We must no weaken.

"Perhaps if we count up the material things we lose—our property and our worldly goods—it may seem very much, but I don't think the women of Plymouth will ever count that way.

"Hitler may wreck our homes but he will never break our hearts.

"In the past few days among the people of Plymouth I have seen the greatest courage and gallantry. I have spoken to hundreds of women in their troubles.

"I shall always remember two of them. One old lady walking out of her home which is in ashes had nothing left but the clothes she wore. She said to me 'I am beat but not broken. Hitler will never win this way.'

"A younger woman with four children—whose husband is at sea—took me to the ruins of her home. As I came away she said 'It is all pretty bad but still I am free to go where I like and think what I like. Hitler can't stop that.'"

Demolition, salvage and rescue squads still worked to unearth the dead buried under the debris. Troops and sailors cleared dangerous sites. Supplies of tea and cigarettes were rushed into the city, and naval authorities turned over some of their stores to the municipality which is feeding the homeless.

The Word 'Bottleneck' Has Palled on Knudsen

New York, March 23 (AP).—William S. Knudsen is sick of the term "bottleneck."

"I hate the word," said the co-director of the Office of Production Management as he left by Army plane for Detroit.

Knudsen said many difficulties in the defense production program had been eliminated, then remarked with a wry smile:

"The only 'bottleneck' we have is time."

Rep. Maas Treats World War Superior to Plane Ride

Representative Melvin J. Maas, of Minnesota, had an opportunity to show his wartime captain and pilot instructor a few tricks in the air yesterday.

MAAS
"He did a pretty good job of it."

Maas, ranking minority member of the House Naval Affairs Committee, flew the plane down to Norfolk alone Saturday to inspect the new Naval Air Station there.

During the war the 42-year-old Congressman was a corporal under Evans, then a captain, with the First Marine Aeronautic Company in the Azores. Evans taught him to fly but until yesterday had not seen him at the controls of a plane for 21 years.

Maas now outranks his former superior, who was called from retirement recently to command the Marine Barracks at the Naval Operating Base at Norfolk.

Giant Turbine Soon to Put The Wind to Work on Defense

By the Associated Press

Hubbardton, Vt., March 22.—A giant wind turbine, designed to test the feasibility of harnessing mountain winds as another source of commercial electric power and a possible adjunct of national defense, neared completion today atop breezy Grandpa's Knob in the Green Mountains.

With the erection of a 110-foot steel tower, and the acquisition of two 22-ton blades that will give the structure features of both an old-time windmill and a slick Army bomber, engineers said assembly would advance quickly and that the turbine might be ready for trial about June 1.

S. D. Dornbirer, superintendent of field erection for the S. Morgan Smith Co., of York, Pa., owner of the turbine, said it was "the only one of its size and kind that we know about in the United States."

Plans for the lofty station call for the generation of 1,000 killowatts of power, sufficient to light five 100-watt lamps apiece for 2,000 families.

When placed on the tower, the giant blades—assembled like the propeller of an airplane and reassembling the wings of a bomber—will have a wing-spread of 180 feet.

Mechanism within the tower will be so arranged, Dornbirer said, that the blades will "yaw" into the wind at all times. The rotating mass will exceed 75 tons, including the blades and other mechanism.

U. S. to Boost Shipbuilding Rate 10-Fold

By Ernest Barcella,
United Press Staff Writer

Government shipbuilding schedules call for a late-1941 production rate 10 times greater than that of 1939, a survey showed last night.

The Maritime Commission began its merchant marine rehabilitation program in February, 1939, and by March 1940, approximately 200,000 tons of shipping had been constructed. Current plans contemplate production of cargo vessels totaling 1,000,000 tons in the six months beginning next November.

This 10-fold increase, officials said, will come from vast expansion of the Nation's shipbuilding facilities and use of modern construction methods. Another big contributing factor is that some 600 planned ships probably will be of the pre-fabricated one-design "ugly duckling" style designed largely for speed of production.

Of the 600 "ugly ducklings," 200 are to be for the United States Merchant Marine and 400 for Great Britain. Funds for the latter are contained in the $7,000,000,000 British-aid bill scheduled for Senate consideration tomorrow. Their cost was estimated at $500,000,000.

Work on the 200 ships intended for this country's merchant fleet already is well under way, a maritime official disclosed. He said engines are being built and steel is being fabricated for the vessels. Work is progressing rapidly, he added, on several of the 51 shipways to be built in seven yards for assembly of the ships.

The keel for the first of the "ugly ducklings" is scheduled to be laid April 15 at the Wilmington, N. C., yards of the North Carolina Shipbuilding Co. The first vessel is scheduled to be completed by November.

Plans to build the 400 ships for Britain were disclosed Saturday. Whether they would be the "ugly ducklings" type was not certain, but an authoritative source said it was likely they would at least be similar.

Maritime circles speculated on whether the 400 would be built in the same yards, or whether new yards would be ordered to care for the British needs. All existing yards already are working at capacity to fill domestic requirements.

The "far-reaching and lasting contributions" made by the Society of Jesus since the Rev. Andrew White, Jesuit priest, landed at the Maryland colony from the Ark and Dove on March 25, 1634, were described to alumni of 20 Jesuit colleges and universities at a breakfast communion in the Mayflower Hotel here yesterday.

These fathers of the order in America were characterized as a "noble band of men" who left their impress on Maryland, by Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor, of Maryland, one of five radio speakers in a Nation-wide program commemorating the 400th anniversary of the order's founding.

Prominent Speakers

The other speakers were William F. O'Neil, of Akron, president of the General Tire & Rubber Co.; Pierre Crabites, of New Orleans, American National Commissioner under provisions of the Egypto-American Treaty; Dr. A. H. Giannini, of San Francisco, president of the California Medical Association, and the Rev. Zacheus J. Maher, S. J., American assistant to the superior general of the Society of Jesus in Rome. Their addresses were from their respective cities to a chainwork of communion breakfasts.

The large numbers of Jesuit school alumni who have distinguished themselves in professional and public fields "have testified to the worth of the order's schools," O'Conor said, while Giannini declared "their readiness to shed their blood for their cause is attested by a long roll of martyrs."

In Europe, Giannini said, "youth stands hypnotized in the presence of power," but under the Catholic philosophy the state is not exalted over the individual's conscience. The other speakers told of the Jesuits' work in spiritual and educational fields.

Dr. Leibell Chairman

Dr. Casimir Leibell, of Georgetown University faculty, was chairman of the breakfast. Among those present were the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of the university; Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., vice president and dean of the university's School of Foreign Service; the Rev. John E. Grattan, S. J. dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, Georgetown; Dr. John McIntire, president of the Georgetown dental alumni; Dr. James A. Cahill, president of the Georgetown Medical alumni, and Dr. William N. Cogan, dean emeritus of the dental school, Georgetown.

The Washington alumni of the Jesuit institutions at 10 a. m. attended a mass in Dahlgren Chapel on the Georgetown campus. From there they went to the Mayflower Hotel, where the communion breakfast was held. The observance was held yesterday, the nearest Sunday to the anniversary date of the Maryland landing. Since 1634, the society has established institutions in 180 communities. An estimated 120,000 alumni heard the broadcast program yesterday.

U. S. Chamber To Concentrate On Defense

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States announced last night that the national rearmament will be the main topic of discussion during its twenty-ninth annual meeting here, April 28 to May 1. It said that addresses and discussions "will go into the many phases of the preparedness effort, including the production of defense materials and the effect on the national economy of the defense program as it progresses."

The meeting will bring to the Capital about 2,500 of America's business leaders, representing more than 1,000 chambers of commerce and 500 trade associations, having a combined membership of three-quarters of a million business men.

The sessions will consider the extent to which war production may be superimposed on the country's normal business operations without disruption of ordinary economic processes.

On the program for addresses, besides business spokesmen, will be civilian officials in the Government's defense establishment and high-ranking officers of the Army and Navy.

The meeting will open on April 28 with a session of the chamber's national council, which is made up of one representative from each member organization. The subject before this session will be "Organization Preparedness." Chambers of commerce and trade associations, the national chamber said, have been active in the defense effort and have been of invaluable assistance to the Government in preparation for the huge program of war production.

On the evening of April 28 the American section of the International Chamber of Commerce will hold the stage. The subject for this session will be "The World Today."

General sessions of the convention will open on the morning of April 29. The sessions that day will consider questions of production, purchasing for defense and allied subjects. The second day's session will open with discussion of essential materials in defense and the problem of maintaining the American standard of living. In the afternoon there will be seven round table conferences. They will deal with natural resources and defense, labor relations, foreign trade, transportation and defense, consumer goods, supplies and prices, agricultural adjustment problems and the relation of insurance to national security. At the general session Thursday morning Federal fiscal policies will be discussed.

The meeting will close with the annual dinner on the evening of May 1.

Liquor Called 5th Columnist At Rally of Dry Forces Here

Booze was branded a fifth columnist by the United Dry Forces of the District of Columbia, in a mass meeting yesterday at the National City Christian Church on Thomas Circle.

The organization passed a resolution denouncing it and urging the President to bar it from military and naval establishments. Congress was asked to impose penalties on persons selling it around the confines of these places.

The action followed an address by Representative Joseph R. Bryson (Democrat), of South Carolina, who characterized alcohol as a waster in three respects: Of wealth, of physical forces and of spiritual strength, all "sorely needed for national defense."

He fixed America's drink bill in 1940 at $5,000,000,000, and said that 65 per cent of the automobile accidents in 1939 were preceded by drinking. Concerning liquors bearing on national defense, Bryson said it should be considered no less seriously than other "bottlenecks."

Bryson attributed the fall of France partly to drinking and asked if tomorrow would find America softened by alcohol. Surveying the scene, he reminded that the word "saloon" has been dropped from usage, to be supplanted by the words "cocktail lounge" which, he said, mean the same thing. He wanted to see booze removed from around the camps, and condemned the "effrontery" of one of his constituents who requested his aid in getting a liquor concession.

The resolution, introduced by the Rev. Dale Crowley, a local evangelist, called upon "our President to defend our defenders by immediately abolishing the sale and consumption of all alcoholic liquors in the forts, training camps, cantonments, flying fields and all military bases on land and sea . . . that we call upon Congress to enact immediately such legislation, with severe penalties for its violation, as will protect the youth of the Nation from this recognized fifth column in the Army and in all forts and camps as an act of patriotic service in defense of the Flag . . ."

Justin Lawrie, local tenor, sang two solos; R. L. Clark and A. L. Bennet played a clarinet duet, and the congregation sang "Faith of Our Fathers." The Rev. Dr. Thomas E. Boorde presided.

The audience was estimated at 350 persons.

Frolic Planned By Sidney Lust

Sidney Lust, operator of a chain of suburban theaters, yesterday announced plans for Easter celebrations for children in nearby Maryland.

Arch McDonald, it was announced, will preside as master of ceremonies at an Easter frolic Saturday, April 12, at Lust's Bethesda Theater.

An Easter egg hunt will be held Monday, April 14, at Magruder Park, Hyattsville, under auspices of Lust's theaters and the Prince Georges County Kiwanis Club. Art Brown, radio personality, will be master of ceremonies. An Easter queen will be crowned.

Woodside Park Meeting

J. Donald Clagett and J. Darby Bowman, officials of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, will address the Woodside Park (Md.) Civic Association Wednesday at 8:30 p. m. in the Montgomery Hills Junior High School, Second Avenue, Silver Spring, Md.

Pilotless Plane Takes Off, Flies, And Then—

Revere, Mass., March 23 (INS).—A pilotless airplane took off from Muller's field airport by itself this afternoon, climbed to an altitude of 1,000 feet, soared for a quarter of a mile and crashed in flames on International Highway.

The light two-seater cabin type ship was standing on "the line" with 12 other planes, its motor idling, when suddenly the motor began to race. The plane lurched forward, breaking its guyropes and then shot down the field scattering more than a hundred spectators before it. Then it turned into the wind and climbed in an almost perfect take-off.

Over the highway, jammed with Sunday traffic, the plane went into a spin, plunging to earth and narrowly missing the line of automobiles.

WASHINGTON IS CHAMPION CONGA TOWN. Jack Coffey, who's just brought his orchestra to the Wardman Park Hotel, says that Washingtonians are the best conga dancers in the country. He was surprised when everyone in the packed Burgundy Room joined the conga line on his opening night, and plumb astonished when the line went through six fairly intricate routines without a hitch or blunder. "In every other city where we've played, the conga line always got tangled up somewhere," he said. "Washingtonians dance the conga like South Americans, are the best I've ever seen." . . . The new Burgundy Room is a paradisic vision in deep rose and pink. Because of the rosy lights the silver decorations appear as "pink silver."

The "swing polka," new dance first seen at the recent Yale prom, was introduced to Washington last Saturday at the Pall Mall Room by the Arthur Murray Dancers. It's a hummer, evoked loads of enthusiasm.

PET PRODIGALS RETURN. Jerry Brandow, the original "Hold Tight" boy, will return to Paul Young's tomorrow eve. This is grand news for connoisseurs of "boogie-woogie." Newcomers tomorrow eve will be the luscious Eden Sisters, dancers from Miami. Tonight's your last chance to hear DeLloyd Hughes . . . Over at the Casino Royal they should be killing a fatted calf for Russ LeBeau this evening. Russ is the acrobat who's also a showman and comedian and has always stopped the show at his previous Casino R. appearances. Ballroom steppers Guido and Drene will be new in this week's revue and the Hollywood Starlets will offer fresh picture dances.

DESIGN FOR SUMMER. When Don Carper's Four leave the Cafe Caprice on May 28 they'll go direct to the Stuyvesant in Buffalo for four weeks, then to New York's Piccadilly for the balance of the summer . . . There's a whisper that when dancing is moved from Caprice to the Roger Smith's Starlight Roof, the Arthur Herbert band that made such a hit last summer will be back on the bandstand.

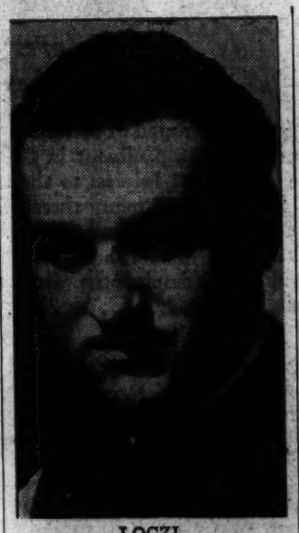
EMPRESS ZITA CARMELA. Carmela Lazari, of the Hi Hat, has a new and picturesque pompadour that transforms her into the living image of former Empress Zity of Austria in her youth. Our authority is Manager Oscar, a native Viennese, who frequently saw Empress Zity in her happier days . . . "Gallagher and Shean" is due to burst over Hi Hat like a burst of fire bombs any day this week. Jimmy Summerville has been picking over the old "G. and S." lyrics, writing a bunch of astounding new ones.



LOCZI,
Gypsy cymbalon player at the new Plymouth

Pete Macias, of the Lounge Riviera, speaking. "That new 'Saga of Jenny' song is just 'Frankie and Johnny' with a Harvard accent."

SINGING WITHOUT SOUND. Now we can tell you that only two-thirds of the Neptune Room's Dalton Boys were singing last week. Jack (the one with the blond mustache) had laryngitis, was just making motions with his lips. But Kelly and Pete covered up for him splendidly. The trio came over to your columnist's table, asked how we liked the singing. "Fine," we said innocently. They all leered delightedly, couldn't resist telling the truth. But Jack will be singing again sho' 'nuff this afternoon.

TABLECLOTH CAMPAIGN. Mihran Garabedian, native Armenian of the Madrillon staff, drew tablecloth pictures of possible Turkish military campaigns for a guest the other evening. He's just received a clipping of a two-column newspaper story on the Balkans in which he's given full credit for his prognostications. The guest was Newspaper Correspondent Charles Brooks.

THE "MAYOR'S" AMAZING COAT. We rubbed our eyes when we entered Ciro's Famous Village. For "Mayor" Ciro was togged out in a caramel colored coat that's said to be the last word in Southern resort styles. It came halfway to his knees, was fastened snugly but without visible buttons. This sartorial masterpiece was sold to the "Mayor" by Mike Durso, authority on the well-dressed man . . . The real payoff is that Mike will probably put in a couple of weeks as the Village's master of ceremonies some time in April. That, my frans, will be worth going hundreds of miles to see.

Carmen Cavallaro's orchestra, most potent attraction ever booked into the Carlton Hotel, will probably remain in the Cosmos Room until it is closed for the summer.

GIGGLES AND SOBS. The King Cole Room sends us a folder inscribed vernally, "The first robin is always welcome, so is the first swallow" . . . One of the town's leading maestros has an awful headache. He missed his chance to get in on that cocoa coup that was engineered on the market last week. . . . Jim Walter, tub-thumper for the Rainbow Room, writes that check girl Margaret Pugliese would like to keep in trim by going swimming, if she knew how to swim. Yes, my darling daughter! . . . Matt Windsor of the Anchor Room vows that his month-old son already shows signs of musical talent. When he cries, he cries on key . . . Maestro Dick Koons, of the Mayflower Lounge, has stopped studying shorthand at business school now that he's married, is taking private instructions instead. His bride is a secretary.

ROLLIN' DOWN TO RIO. True and Trudy, the "Golden Pair," appearing at the Shoreham this week, write that they recently returned from Rio de Janeiro "with memories of beauty that will last forever." While there they made a Brazilian motion picture that ran for three weeks in a leading Rio theater.

OF YOUNG LADIES. Adele Van, of Mayfair, designs every one of those glittering creations she wears an the bandstand . . . Jane Marlow, of Restaurant "823," is the only girl violinist in town and as clever as she is charming. Jane has a smile for every "823" customer, but her heart belongs to ——, maybe we'd better not tell . . . Lina D'Acosta, of the Silver Fox, is often greeted by foreign diplomats whom she met while appearing on the French Riviera . . . Most musically named singer hereabouts is Dena Larena, Troika's magnetic blonde, whose specialty is "Bublitchki."

Manager Dick Lam, of the Lotus, is planning another super-dooper revue to open next Monday. The Eight Colleens, Bob and Betty De Witt, and Elsie, the Hoop-la Heifer, are all held over for this week.

'Uninterested' In 1944 Race, Willkie Says

New York, March 23 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie said tonight he was "not the slightest interested at this time in the candidacy of anyone for any office in 1942 or 1944."

He made the statement when asked to comment on the assertion of an unidentified Republican National Committeeman in Washington that the Republican 1940 Presidential candidate was "not interested" in running for President in 1944. The committeeman speculated that Willkie might support Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota for the nomination.

A Gubernatorial election in New York is among those to be held in 1942.

"Civilization is facing one of its crucial moments," Willkie said. "Talk of party politics and candidates is completely out of place in either party.

"I am interested at this time, aside from necessary devotion to personal affairs, in the elimination of isolationist sentiment in the United States, in the building of an adequate defense system and its competent administration and sanity in our national fiscal policies, all to the end that America may help save liberty for herself and the world.

"I am not the slightest interested at this time in the candidacy of anyone for any office in 1942 or 1944. Such talk is pure nonsense.

The sooner partisan politics is adjourned and talk of candidacies and petty ambitions discontinued, the better off every one will be."

G.O.P. Unlikely to Let Martin Resign Today

The Republican National Committee, meeting here today, is expected to reject the resignation of Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr. (Republican), of Massachusetts, as national chairman.

The committee also is slated to act on the resignation of C. G. Goodspeed, treasurer, who is giving up his post because of ill health.

There have been reports that the committee might decide to appoint one or more executive assistants to Martin. These man would probably be chosen one from each district, the East, Midwest and West.

The identity of Goodspeed's successor appeared to hinge upon whether Martin continues as chairman. Sinclair Weeks, national committeeman for Massachusetts, was mentioned for the treasurership, but if Martin continues as chairman it was believed likely that the treasurership would go to a Westerner. New England already holds the secretaryship, with Harold W. Mason, of Vermont, serving in that capacity.

First Since Convention

Mentioned as possible successors to Goodspeed were Edgar M. Queeney, of St. Louis; James H. Douglas, of Chicago, and Maj. Henry P. Leonard, Colorado State chairman.

The meeting will be the first since the Philadelphia convention, and it will offer the leaders of the party opportunity to consider the reasons for the defeat of the party at the polls in November, and to start plans for the Congressional elections of next year.

Another possible topic today is the question as to what stand the party should take in view of the present Administration's foreign policy.

Wendell L. Willkie, Presidential candidate, has done everything in his power to bring the Republican Party solidly into line in support of President Roosevelt's program for all aid to Great Britain.

Martin Popular

Despite this, however, and his repeated warnings against the Republican Party adopting an isolationist stand on the present European war, Martin and a number of other members of the minority in Congress voted against the President's lend-lease bill.

Martin's prestige with both the followers of Willkie and the friends of Senator Robert A. Taft (Republican), of Ohio, and of District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey is believed to make him the only man who can keep harmony in the party, and it is believed that for this reason the Massachusetts Representative will agree to continue at his present post.

About 80 of the 106 members of the committee have signified that they would attend in person, while the remaining members will send proxies. It is expected that the meeting will end this afternoon.

Democrats Map Plans

Meanwhile, Richard J. Reynolds, treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, announced that Democrats in each of the 48 States, Hawaii and Puerto Rico were cooperating in preparation for the party's Jackson Day celebration on March 29.

Mr. Roosevelt will attend the Jackson Day dinner in Washington, and will deliver a Nation-wide address, while in some of the larger cities two dinners will be held.

Edward J. Flynn, chairman of the committee, commenting on the program, said:

"The attention of the Nation is now centered largely on defense and the foreign situation, and that is as it should be. Yet the members of the party should not forget that the administration of our Government is largely in the hands of the Democratic Party and if the party is to discharge its trust properly, a strong organization is essential."

Young Singers Win Met Contracts

woods near Fairfax Station for an hour and a half. Firemen saved valuable timber, confining the blaze to the undergrowth.

At least ten fires broke out in the Bethesda, Chevy Chase, Silver Spring and Rockville areas.

Ben Wilkinson, jr., State's attorney for Montgomery County, gave a reminder yesterday that it is a criminal offense to permit fires to get out of hand. Fines range from $10 to $100. Wilkinson requested that persons preparing to burn off grass plots notify their local fire companies.

A small blaze in Rock Creek Park was the only brush fire reported in the District besides the one at the zoo.

Henderson Sets Aluminum Prices

ently unwarranted price increases in various other industries" had occurred.

"Should these movements continue," he added, "price ceilings will have to be established in these industries. We hope this action will not be necessary, but if it is we are ready to enforce reasonable price limits."

Under normal conditions prices for secondary aluminum do not exceed prices for virgin aluminum, Henderson said. Recently, however, the price stabilization division has received reports of sales of aluminum scrap of as high as 32 cents a pound, which is almost double the price of the virgin metal, he noted.

The ceiling price schedule announced yesterday was designed to peg prices for aluminum scrap and secondary aluminum to the price of virgin aluminum, Henderson explained.

"Reasonable Profit"

"These ceiling prices," he said, "will give ample allowance for reasonable profit to both dealers and smelters."

For piston struts when sold by the makers Henderson set a maximum price of 9½ cents a pound and for sales of that type by dealers he set a price of 10½ cents a pound. Maximum prices of 13 cents a pound for pure clips and cable when sold by makers and 14½ cents when sold by dealers, were ordered.

Maximum prices for secondary aluminum ingot were fixed as follows:

Ninety-eight per cent aluminum ingot, 17 cents a pound; silicon alloys, 17 cents; deoxidizing aluminum, 16½ cents, plus 2 cents for special shapes; piston alloys, 16½ cents, and No. 12 aluminum, 16 cents a pound.

Recent advances in prices of aluminum scrap and secondary aluminum were attributed by Henderson to "failure of the sources of virgin aluminum to meet current demand—especially the demand of fabricators making items for civilian needs—and the recent issuance of a priorities order restricting the use of virgin aluminum to defense purposes."

Congress To Get D. C. Traffic Plan

highly controversial subject of route locations through the eastern part of the city.

But he did reveal that one express artery would "unquestionably" be constructed to by-pass Georgetown. One alternative would be an elevated express highway along the Potomac similar to the West Side highway along the Hudson River in New York City, he said.

A subway under Georgetown is the other alternative, he pointed out, adding that a study of comparative costs will determine the recommendation. In addition, he said, the report will recommend the widening of the Rock Creek Parkway from the Zoo to Potomac Parkway.

Van Duzer Enthusiastic

William A. Van Duzer, District vehicles and traffic director, yesterday expressed enthusiastic support for the express artery proposals.

"However," he added, "I don't think the people of Washington will stand for unsightly elevated highways. Depressed highways and subways are the answer."

Washington I. Cleveland, District manager of the American Automobile Association, said that motor subways will only bring a large number of cars down town, complicating the current parking problem.

"There are only 5,000 to 6,000 curb spaces downtown for the 150,000 to 160,000 cars that come downtown each day," he said. "A survey of underground highways ought to take in the possibility of rapid-transit subways to cut the number of cars traveling downtown. Plans for off-street parking downtown should also be pushed."

pivot."

"Now, it is natural for the foreign minister of Japan, who had something to do with conclusion of the pact, to meet and know the leaders of the other countries. That might make a big difference in carrying out the pact in the future."

Matsuoka said he already knew Premier Mussolini and Ciano but had not yet met Adolf Hitler and Von Ribbontrop and regarded personal acquaintance with them as "of very, very great importance."

"In history," he asserted, "personal acquaintance has sometimes decided the issue of war or peace. I would like to hear what these leaders have to say and, perhaps, also have occasion to say what I have in mind."

Matsuoka said he "might be given a chance to make a personal observation of western Europe in connection with the war," perhaps including a visit to former battlefields, but that "apart from these general thoughts I have nothing particular in mind."

He will "pay respects to the government here" in a call arranged for tomorrow on Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotoff.

S. A. Lozovsky, vice commissar of foreign affairs who handles Far Eastern matters, headed a small Soviet delegation to meet the first Japanese foreign minister ever to visit Moscow.

The Axis powers, however, turned out full complements from their missions to greet the representative of their Far Eastern ally. The ministers of Hungary, Slovakia, Rumania and Bulgaria, juniors in the Axis, joined them.

But there were no representatives of Yugoslavia, or other neutral or British-allied nations.

2-Gun Sheriff Will Ask Vice Indictments

Berlin, Md., March 23.—Sheriff J. William Hall, two-gun-toting Worcester County officer directing an antivice campaign, said today he would recommend grand jury action against "the whole bunch of law violators" arrested last week in raids on alleged gambling houses and taverns.

The Worcester grand jury convenes tomorrow at Snow Hill.

With two guns in his hands, Sheriff Hall made two "solo" raids yesterday in northern Worcester County near Selbyville, arresting two Negroes.

At one place, Hall took into custody a colored man on charges of carrying a deadly weapon after the sheriff said the man fired two shots between the legs of Charles Rickards, 40, and his father, Frank Rickards, 65, as climax to an argument.

The sheriff then raided a nearby establishment and arrested another colored man on gambling charges. Four other colored men were taken into custody, and Hall said he confiscated dice and money.

Hall said he staged the gambling raid alone after the colored man was alleged to have boasted that he "had protection from the big boss in Snow Hill."

A week ago, Hall raided an establishment near Selbyville, arresting the proprietor and five colored men on "craps shooting" charges.

State's Attorney William G. Kerbin and State troopers aided in last week's raids after which both Kerbin and Hall said "dens of vice" in the county would be "cleaned up without delay," and that the beach resort of Ocean City would be "kept tight and free of vice" during the coming summer season.

This new FEEL FIT Program may be just what you need

It's an easy way, commended by science, for normal people to get more pep — feel better every way

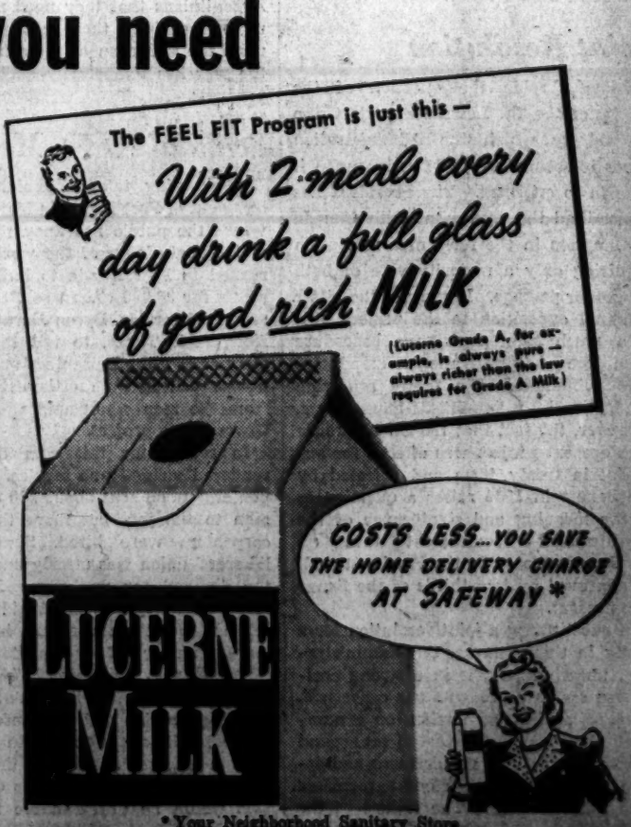
Constant press of details can wear you down as surely as great physical exertion . . . unless you take steps to keep yourself fit!

If you're a well person you don't need medicine. All you may need is the FEEL FIT Program: A full glass of good rich milk with two of your daily meals.

Don't ignore this program just because it's simple. More than any other food, says science, milk provides essential elements our bodies need:

- BUILDS BODY PEP—Milk provides nature's best known protein for repair of worn body cells and muscles. And "protective" vitamin A which helps keep you youthful, vigorous—helps build up your resistance against colds and sickness.
- STEADIES NERVES—An excellent source of vitamin G and a good source of vitamin B, milk combats nervousness, listlessness. Milk helps preserve normal alkalinity of the blood. It promotes good digestion, restful sleep, and a clear complexion.
- AIDS WEIGHT CONTROL—Milk keeps up body strength and energy while you cut down on heavy, fattening foods. Milk contains so many health elements it should be a foundation food in the weight control diet.
- PROMOTES SOUND TEETH AND BONES—Milk furnishes an abundant supply of calcium and phosphorus, vital food minerals your system needs for strong teeth and bone structure. Calcium is necessary for steady working of the heart and normal muscular activity.

Right now—today—is the best time to start on the FEEL FIT Program. To get full benefit, be sure you choose a pure, rich milk like Lucerne Grade A . . . which is always richer than the law requires for Grade A. Lucerne Milk reaches you farm-fresh, in a convenient no-deposit container.



The FEEL FIT Program is just this —
With 2 meals every day drink a full glass of good rich MILK

Victory For Safety

It was a victory for safety when District Commissioner Young decided not to block permanent appointment of Inspector Arthur E. Miller to command all traffic control. As The Post has pointed out, Inspector Miller is the logical man for the job. All motorcycle police recently were placed directly under the Traffic Bureau so that they could be detailed where most useful rather than by precincts. The data Inspector Miller collected and studied as head of the Accident Prevention Unit will be at his fingertips when he employs this centralized force. Furthermore, he has been especially educated for the purpose—safety is his career. A spur to making reorganization effective by this appointment is found in the experience of twenty-four cities which have revamped their traffic safety systems since 1936. According to the International Association of Chiefs of Police, traffic fatalities in these cities averaged 33.3 per cent fewer in 1940 than in the year before reorganization. The Commissioners should consider such gains with satisfaction and hope when they meet this week to confirm the choice made by Police Superintendent Brown.

Gift to Vichy

Gladstone once said that some of the most excusable errors ever committed have been the most ruinous in their consequences. This is the burden of the charge which a group of well-known publicists have leveled at the State Department for supporting the Vichy plea for a food shipment. And on the surface the charge is obtaining some degree of substantiation. Even before the formal British-American announcement of the shipment Saturday, the report had spurred the Hooverites to intensify their campaign for a relaxation of the British blockade of occupied Europe. And some Belgian publicists, with or without the consent of the Belgian government-in-exile, are pressing upon Americans a claim to equal consideration. If this remains the only upshot of the consignment, then the shipment will have been proved a mistake. Nevertheless the shipment was justified. The case in consistency for a gift to Vichy is supported by the fact that unoccupied France is not part of occupied Europe, though it might better be thought of as a Twilight rather than a Free Zone. And, anyway, consistency should have no part in the prosecution of this war. Never was there such a premium on resiliency; never was diplomacy, which is an art of chance-taking, so much the instrument of warfare; and this consignment must be considered only in terms of war policy. Vichy is regarded as in need of strengthening against Nazi pressure, and to that end the flour is destined. As for the Hoover argument, the cause of humanity is in such a perilous pass that there is no room for humanitarianism which does not put liberation before relief.

Joint Resolution

Leaving aside the question of the merits of the St. Lawrence project, the method by which the Administration hopes to secure favorable action upon it is open to criticism. The President has transmitted the agreement with Canada to Congress in the form of a resolution requiring only a majority vote of both houses for passage. In view of the bitter sectional opposition to the project, this is a much safer legislative procedure from the Administration's standpoint than submission of a treaty requiring ratification by a two-thirds Senate vote. However, the fact that the St. Lawrence development project was offered for approval in treaty form and rejected by the Senate in 1934 raises a question as to the meaning and significance of the constitutional requirement that all treaties negotiated by the President shall be approved by two-thirds of the Senators present.

In substituting a joint resolution for a treaty in this instance, the Administration, unfortunately, is in a strong position so far as precedents are concerned. Such action has been taken on a number of occasions in the past to get around the two-thirds vote requirement and assure approval of important agreements with other nations. The failure of the Constitution to define in detail what subjects shall be covered by treaties facilitates executive encroachment upon Senate powers over treaty-making. That only makes it the more imperative for the Senate to assert its constitutional rights, though its shortsightedness in failing to do so in the past makes it more difficult now to take a stand against attempts to put through the St. Lawrence project by the resolution route.

Good Neighbor

But for two mischances—the absence of Vice President Wallace from the Senate chamber and failure to record the vote of one of the Senators present—there would have been no tie in the Senate vote to rescind the ban upon purchases of Argentine beef for the Navy, and the House might have subsequently agreed to lift the ban. As a matter of fact, the ban which the Administration was anxious to have deleted from the naval appropriations bill is not directed specifically against Argentine beef products. It is a sweeping prohibition against the use of Navy funds for "the procurement of any article of food not grown or produced in the United States or its possessions." An exception is made in regard to articles that are not produced here in sufficient quantity or cannot be procured when needed. But it is Argentina that the Administration has particularly in mind in seeking the voidance of this purchasing restriction, which, incidentally, does not apply to the Army, but only to the Navy. We have amends to make to Argentina. That country is still smarting under the embargo imposed upon its fresh and frozen meats by insulting "sanitary" regulations issued in accordance with the Tariff Act of 1930. Two years ago we reopened the wound by the ban we imposed upon Navy purchases of her canned beef. The time has come to move in the direction of assuaging the hurt, rather than in rubbing it in.

And this is not an argument only for justice and good neighborliness. Amelioration is called for by bare commonsense. There appears to be no doubt that the Argentine canned beef product is superior in quality to the domestic canned beef. The reason is that better beef is used for canning, whereas our best beef goes into steaks and roasts. Moreover, the Argentine product is much cheaper, even with the addition of a substantial import duty. Then, the amount of beef purchased by the Navy would be a negligible fraction of the amount produced in the United States, and, finally, there is a real need for increased supplies of canned beef for the armed forces.

Stress is laid upon these lesser arguments in favor of lifting the Navy ban on Argentine canned beef because they throw into high relief the larger issue involved. This is whether we intend to recognize our obligation to practice as well as preach a good neighbor policy in our dealings with the countries of this hemisphere. Being a "good neighbor" does not imply that we must throw down all barriers to entry of products that compete with those of our own factories and farms. The Administration made it clear when it was negotiating reciprocal trade treaties with Latin-American governments that reasonable protection would continue to be accorded to our own producers. But there is nothing reasonable in an action that would choke off a trade in canned beef which would be advantageous from every economic standpoint.

We make generous gestures toward Argentina, and lend her funds with which to tide over emergencies resulting from the loss of trade with Europe. Yet Congress, by its jealous policy of exclusion, is doing its best to convince the Argentinians that they need not look to us to emancipate them from dependence upon the European markets from which the war has temporarily excluded their products.

Scandal At Ft. Meade

A shocking tale of exploitation has come out of Fort Meade in Maryland. For weeks the public has known something of the shakedown of the workmen who rushed to Fort Meade to build cantonments for 30,000 citizen soldiers. But it remained for Mr. Byron Darnton, of the New York Times, to tell the detailed story of how the carpenters' and laborers' unions collected an estimated $400,000 from the men who found work on this Government project.

In return for this sum the unions rendered virtually no service. The carpenters' union sent about 200 of its own men to the job, but more than 10,000 carpenters were hired. Similarly the laborers' union was utterly unable to fill the demand for workmen. Men were hired on the job without aid from the unions. Yet the carpenters, including a large number of incompetents, were forced to pay the unions $57.50 and the laborers $25 in initiation fees. The unions grew rich at the expense of workmen who did not wish to join them, and who in all probability will drop out as soon as this temporary job is ended.

It would be unreasonable to assume that either the contractor or the unions are wholly responsible for this holdup. The contractor had long operated under a closed shop. Neither he nor the unions wished to disturb their routine relationship. Yet the system operated in this instance to enrich the unions at public expense, to say nothing of the fraud practiced upon the workmen by racketeers posing as union dues collectors. Blame for this flagrant exploitation seems to fall chiefly upon the Government because of its failure to work out a reasonable policy to meet an emergency situation.

Unions have nothing to gain but public ill-will from the coercion of emergency workers into the payment of union dues. They could not afford to accept as permanent members all the incompetents who are pressed into service for an emergency job of this kind. From the viewpoint of the Government, moreover, it is utterly absurd to require the payment of union dues by every man who volunteers for what is essentially defense work. The principle of the closed shop has no place whatever in this picture. Injustice and exploitation will be the rule rather than the exception until the Administration or Congress lays down a sensible ban upon the closed shop for emergency defense work of this character.

Raiders Of The Sea

The difficulties created for the British by German raiders in World War I is well illustrated by Winston Churchill in his book, "The World Crisis." When that struggle began, the Germans had eight modern cruisers, five gunboats, and more than forty armed merchantmen capable of preying on commerce, on foreign stations. Most of these armed merchantmen were successfully prevented from leaving port, and the five that did get out were overtaken before the end of 1914. The German cruisers proved a far more difficult problem, and the commerce raiding exploits of one of them, the Emden, have passed into history.

Ultimately all of them were brought to book. But it took a considerable effort. No fewer than eight British warships had to be freed of other duties to give chase to the Emden and the Koenigsberg. And to compass the destruction of five other German warships, says Mr. Churchill, "only two of which were armoured, it was necessary to employ nearly thirty, including twenty-one armoured ships, the most part of superior metal, and this took no account of the powerful Japanese squadrons, and of French ships or of armed merchant cruisers, the last-named effective for scouting."

The presence in Atlantic waters today of a German battleship squadron is, therefore, a very ominous development for the British. We may assume, on the basis of past experience with German extravagance, that the German high command's communique of Saturday asserting that this squadron had already sunk 22 armed merchantmen totaling 116,000 tons is a gross exaggeration. Nonetheless, there can be little doubt that considerable damage to British shipping has been done by the German raiders and will continue to be done unless and until they are overtaken and destroyed. Accordingly the British will be compelled to detach capital ships from other areas and assign them to the task of tracking down and giving battle to the German battleships. This will be a risky matter at this time when, unlike the situation that obtained in the last war, Britain is without naval allies. Still, Hitler, too, is taking risks in sending a good part of his naval strength on this raiding venture, though the risks are hardly on all fours.

Here is the problem as Berlin no doubt sees it: If these surface raiders plus submarines and bombers can cut British supply lines, the Third Reich will be nearer to winning the war. If, however, the war is prolonged, the little naval power which Germany possesses will be of negligible value to her anyway. For her present inferiority in naval tonnage would be increased very considerably as a result of American construction of warships turned over to the British on lend-lease account. In the meantime the toll of British shipping rises to dangerous heights, a circumstance which neither the British nor we can view with anything but a determination to meet the new challenge boldly and jointly.

SPRING IN ENGLAND—1941

How strange it is to us to see, above
The black, torn field, green blades of grass appear;
To see, against burned walls, the glowing of
New leaves, to hear some small bird, singing clear.
In such stern times, it seems a mockery
To note a bulb's slim fingers pushing up
Between the broken bricks, or else to see
In sunlight, some new blossom's early cup.
To us, stripped of all beauty, of all mirth,
It seems so cruel that, on some twisted briar
Growing upon stained beams, brought low to earth,
There should appear small roses like gay fire.
How strange it is to see, against the black,
Torn trees, white laughter of the spring come back.

"The Dead Laugh"

It seems that now the world is definitely committed to destruction, that Rome burns again before long, that books of men we steered by are destroyed, and architecture by which we modeled our own cities and living will soon be no more, it seems to me that the dead who so vainly hoped for peace and the elevation of mankind must be as sardonically amused as ourselves at the utter waste of everything done or attempted in their day and ours.

Apparently the day of judgment is upon us. The judgment is apparently against peace, against beauty of form and thought, against meditation, against truth.

If Britain fights a losing battle, if Germany, casting aside the sincerity of pledges, carries on through lies and aggression to ultimate victory, it will be surely too much to expect of humanity that it keep its hold on the Man of Peace . . . on the Doctrine of Truth.

The dead builders of empires built for aggrandizement, but today the empire that is Britain stands for peace. America stands for peace. These two, out of all the world, are still for peace, but owing to aggression are being made to fight, and are not necessarily going to win. I am not sure they will lose, but what I do see is the ghastly waste, beautiful boys of every age dying, stored knowledge and romance destroyed, spiritual values outraged.

With men of brains and worth tortured in concentration camps, the family standard broken, love denied in every possible way, and even the spirit itself killed by drugs within the body of soldiers that they tire not in carrying out evil orders . . . all this leaves little hope for the climb to higher ideals.

The dead must laugh, and looking at the triumph of ruthlessness over what is called righteousness, in our day the living must also laugh with the same sardonic laughter.

This, after all the preaching of the doctrine of Christianity, of brotherly love, of democracy, is a reflection on the saintly talkers who talk merely and do not act. Action has got Germany where she is, want of action has got the rest of the world where it stands today. The church has failed. Militarism has succeeded. The one preached and did not practice, the other practiced and did very little preaching. Faith without works is dead. Christianity spoke of holiness . . . but only spoke, and now the dead laugh.

Mr. Visson's Article

I trust the optimism of M. Andre Visson's interesting article in The Post will be justified by events.

As a former fellow student of Prince Paul of Yugoslavia and one who knows that country, will you, however, allow me to point out certain inaccuracies in Mr. Visson's statements. He says of Prince Paul that "he had been brought up at Oxford with the Duke of York and Duke of Kent as fellow students." Neither the Duke of York (now King George VI of England) nor the Duke of Kent were ever students at Oxford. King George VI was, however, a student for a year at Cambridge, and King Edward VIII, then Prince of Wales and now Duke of Windsor, was a student at Oxford.

To say that Paul "founded in Belgrade the finest art museum in the Balkans" does scant justice to Athens, and surely Greece must be accounted a Balkan country. And few competent critics would agree that the examples of Rubens in Paul's private collection were among the best works of that master.

Finally, if the Karageorges are "the only national dynasty in the Balkans" their recent origin must not be overlooked, nor the fact that they succeeded to the throne through the terrible private assassinations of less than half a century ago. But what of the dynasty that they supplanted and of the Montenegrin and Albanian dynasties? Surely, these, too, were national.

Does Japan Have What It Takes To Be A World Power?

Japan, as a world industrial and military power, is a false alarm. She has not the necessary natural resources. The United States need have little fear of menace from a vast Asiatic empire controlled and led by Japan. Yet that country has a very great nuisance value in eastern Asia, much greater than that of Italy in the Mediterranean. The United States cannot look with indifference on Japanese moves to the south and west.

No nation has ever achieved industrial preeminence without large resources, in its own home territory, of essential raw materials. Very large supplies at least of iron and coal—upon which England's early rise was largely founded—are necessary. Japan has but small coal deposits, no iron to speak of, and no other resources of an important order save cheap labor. Therefore, unless Japan can do what no other country has ever done and develop great industries with her own labor outside her native territories, her dream of industrial empire is unfounded—her pinnacle of power perhaps already past, with the misadventure in China.

Yet Japan must industrialize or retrogress, and it is improbable that she is bluffing in her advance toward Singapore. With over 70,000,000 people in an area only one-twentieth the size of the United States, and only one-sixth of that arable, she has reached the limit of domestic expansion. She is embarked upon a desperate, deadly serious, effort to seize the resources of the mainland and southeastern islands, and the markets afforded by a billion inhabitants.

These resources, while not as great as popularly supposed—small, in fact, by American or European standards—are very considerable: some iron and coking coal in China, much more in India and Australia; antimony, tungsten and tin in China and Malaysia; the petroleum, rubber and vegetable oils of the Dutch East Indies; the rice of Indo-China; to mention only some of the most prominent.

In welding all this into her Oriental "Grossraumwirtschaft" Japan's military problem is just as great as her economic. To control the mainland she must dominate both the central continental positions (the interior of China and perhaps, eventually, Tibet) and the great sea routes in the Pacific and Indian Oceans. Now Japan cannot dominate the Asiatic Continent as Britain has dominated the Continent of Europe by a balance of power system, playing off different nations against each other and keeping the strategic central position (Bohemia) in the hands of a moderately strong but nonaggressive power (the old Austro-Hungarian Empire). Japan has to conquer and rule direct her continental positions, and after three years spent in that vain attempt is now in the process of withdrawing, at least temporarily, to turn her attention to the matter of sea control.

Japan has the strongest naval force based in the western Pacific, but she lacks the major naval base, that at Singapore. Given that, she can dominate the Oriental waters; without it, she can never hope to complete her program of empire. And since this imperial dream is her only chance of avoiding serious, permanent, decline—probably even revolution—she can only be expected to take the fateful plunge, so soon as a propitious moment shall arrive.

The best informed observers believe that the moment will be chosen to synchronize with Hitler's invasion attempt on Britain, or at least with any evidences of success in that attempt. And the prevailing opinion of authorities here is that Japan's move toward Singapore will find the American fleet in possession of that base, cooperating with British, Australian and Dutch forces. That, of course, will mean war.

Only one reservation seems in order in suggesting this train of events. That is the attitude of Russia. Japan obviously cannot afford to move southward if she has any apprehension of a Russian move on her rear. She could not fight the Soviet and an Anglo-American combination at the same time. But Russia is believed to be well into the conspiracy to break up the British Empire, and it is not hard to believe that the Kremlin may prove complaisant.

In this sort of a situation, isolationists have better ground to stand upon than they have in opposing aid to Britain in the Atlantic. It is not so readily to be seen upon what ground of national interest we oppose the entirely comprehensible ambitions of Japan, especially as they seem doomed to break down of their own weight. Why not withdraw from the Orient, stop trying "to pull Britain's chestnuts out of the fire?"

It sounds plausible. But as a matter of fact, they are our own chestnuts. To withdraw from the Orient, to fail effectually to oppose Japan, would be—aside from any bad faith towards the Philippines—to throw China to the wolves.

Now China, entirely apart from its sentimental value in American eyes, is an essential link in the world democratic front which this country is forging, not merely as a war measure against totalitarianism, but as the necessary framework for a stable postwar world order, in which alone the United States can find security. China is needed not only as a wartime ally against the Axis, but as part of a comprehensive peacetime set-up to neutralize the dominant power of a Europe, unified under either German or British leadership—or Russian?

And if we throw China over now, there is always the possibility that the Japanese, with Nazi conniving, might be astute enough to offer the Celestials under Chiang Kai-shek genuinely attractive terms, to come in on the Greater East Asian new order. Then all of the Orient would be thrown into God-knows-what chaos of revolutionary ferment. Western influence would be permanently banished, the great naval base controlling all that store of important raw materials lost, and the specter raised of a possible genuine Yellow Peril to be faced in reality if ever those hundreds of millions of people came to be united under any competent aggressive leadership.

Slave To Red Tape

I am writing this from a prison—a prison of filing cabinets, carbon paper, impeccably correct margins, precision and repression—a prison from which I have no hope of escape.

It was the lawyers and Miss B. who put me there. With the smug self-righteousness characteristic of lawyers and Miss B., they even believe they have done me a favor.

It all happened when I left newspapers and went into business, "because it would be wonderful background and experience for future work on newspapers." Miss B. was my secretary; the lawyers were the rest of the office. I found myself in New York, barricaded by Miss B. from the entire outside world, except, of course, the lawyers who constituted the balance of the Wall Street establishment.

I should have expected the worst the day I dictated my first letter to Miss B.

"How many carbons?" she asked.

"None," I answered. "Why bother?"

Miss B.'s carefully groomed eyebrows arched above her carefully groomed (and by no means unattractive) face.

This was the beginning of the end. There are always carbons, I was told. One carbon stayed in my office, another three or four went to the files, several more were generously distributed to people who had no interest in them, and one went always to the general counsel, who invariably requested that I recall the letter and all the carbonaceous images, because there was always something wrong with it—something that Senate investigating committee might frown upon, some undue levity, some—well, just something.

It was useless to argue that we had no anticipation of ever being subject to a Senate investigating committee, and that even if we did, why make it so easy for them; useless to say that if no carbons at all were made or kept, no one, not even the Senate investigators, would ever see the item objected to by the general counsel.

There was also no use in arguing that it was far simpler to scribble 'this stinks" on a chit of paper than to write a memorandum beginning: "With reference to the proposal of Mr. Itchwitch in his memo of June 1 in re consolidation of the earned and capital surplus, my careful consideration leads me to the inescapable conclusion that in the fourth paragraph Mr. Itchwitch . . ."

Without such a memorandum, the general counsel explained, there would be no record. When I asked why there should be a record, he gave up in despair, although three of his assistants worked over me pretty diligently on this point.

The history of those ten months is too gruesome to repeat. Suffice it to say that I was beaten down. Miss B. and the lawyers got me—for keeps. Once I could take a check, scribble an indorsement on the back, and drop it into an envelope addressed to the bank, confident that the bank was honest enough and capable enough to know how to credit it to my account.

Now I am obliged to accompany my check with a letter, consisting mostly of a lengthy salutation and respectful termination, giving careful instructions to the bank as to how the inclosed check for such and such an amount is to be deposited. Then I rewrite the letter, turning the carbon paper the right way, so that the copy is on the second sheet and not, as in the first one, mirror-imaged on the back of the original letter. Then I file the carbon and bite my nails in anxiety until I receive an acknowledgment from the bank. This I also file, "so that there will be a record."

For months now I have owed Leonard Lyons a letter, but I can never answer his note. Leonard, poor, ignorant and irresponsible fellow, dashed off his letter on a sheet of copy paper and pounded out a couple of nifties for smoking room repetition. Common courtesy demands I send him back some similar noisome yarns, but I simply can't bring myself to do it on the fine bond paper I must use and under the elaborate salutation with which my letter must be prefaced. Besides, the lawyers have warned me about sending such matter through the mails. And those carbon copies—what would the Senate investigating committee think when they browse through my files?

It all used to be so simple and uncomplicated, too. I never needed carbons to remind me that I had sent an instruction to Western Union to sing Happy Birthday to my sister. I seemed perfectly able to get along without those hundreds and hundreds of carefully titled filing folders. But I have to keep them now. It would never do not to have things neat and tidy for that Senate committee.

O. K., you lawyers and Miss B. You win. I will now do things in a businesslike fashion, if you please. But I don't like it.

ALFRED FRIENDLY.

Delay Has Its Uses

Yugoslavia And The Axis

"WHEN THE BEAR dances at your neighbor's," says an old Serbian proverb, "prepare your house to receive him."

NOVER

Germany has been a next-door neighbor of Yugoslavia since Austria disappeared as an independent nation three years ago. She is more than ever Yugoslavia's neighbor now. For, in the meantime, Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria have made common cause with the Axis. The whole of Yugoslavia's northern and western boundaries now front German-dominated regions. Along these boundaries are stationed an untold number of German troops awaiting the signal to march on Greece or Yugoslavia or both. The Nazi bear is about to go into his Balkan dance and the Belgrade government, not without considerable dismay and heart-searching, has been making preparations to receive him.

THE ONLY YUGOSLAV leader of any importance who was prepared to give the Germans the kind of welcome they received from Gen. Antonescu in Bucharest and King Boris in Sofia is former Premier Stoyadinovitch. But the Yugoslav government recently exiled him to Greece and the Greeks sent him on to Egypt. He is now in confinement somewhere in Cairo as the "guest" of the British. In expelling him from the country the Yugoslav leaders wanted to make sure that even if they were forced to come to terms with Hitler that would not mean the establishment of a Quisling regime at Belgrade.

It is doubtful if Prince Regent Paul and Premier Cvetkovitch have the slightest enthusiasm for the step they have been urging the government to take, namely, to sign an agreement with Germany whereby Yugoslavia would become only a limited member of the Axis.

They realize the risks involved in making any concessions to Hitler, certainly the kind of concessions which the Fuehrer demanded as the very minimum price he would take in return for allowing Yugoslavia to remain at peace. By giving Germany the right to send war supplies and wounded soldiers through Yugoslavia and by promising to suppress anti-Axis elements in the kingdom, the Belgrade government would be taking a long step on the road to subjugation. Apparently, Prince Paul, Premier Cvetkovitch and those colleagues who have stood by them believe that the risks that might arise from such an agreement would be less than the risks Yugoslavia would face if Germany chose to invade her.

YUGOSLAV public opinion has, however, risen up in arms against any capitulation to the Nazis. The dilatory policy, whether deliberate or unavoidable, pursued by the Belgrade government has given that opinion a chance to manifest itself. The people are aroused. And while this feeling is instinctive rather than reasoned, while it arises out of a fierce love of liberty rather than out of any careful calculation of the chances Yugoslavia would have in a struggle with a military power which overran Belgium, the Netherlands and France in six weeks, the Belgrade government cannot ignore it.

Nor is that sentiment basically unrealistic. Serbia was overrun during the World War yet emerged from the struggle with enhanced boundaries. In the 23 years that have followed the progress toward real national unity in the triune kingdom has been slow and painful. Serbs, Croats and Slovenes have rarely seen eye to eye. The kingdom's political life has been turbulent. Should Yugoslavia capitulate at this time she might be permitted a period of peace, although that is not certain. Her national unity might in any event be shattered beyond repair.

A GLANCE at the map shows why any promise Hitler is willing to make at this time to respect Yugoslavia's independence is utterly worthless. What, primarily, he is after in the Balkans at this time is the subjection of the peninsula to his will, the elimination of all possibilities of a second war front. To achieve both aims he must end the Italo-Greek war which has proved such a blow to the prestige of his Italian partner. That, in turn, means either getting the Greeks to submit to the threat of overwhelming force, and this they have refused to do so far, or to strike out at Greece with the armies Hitler has assembled in Bulgaria.

Unfortunately for the Germans the Bulgarian approach to the Greek theater of war is not the best approach. It is rugged and mountainous and the passes do not permit large numbers of troops to be deployed. The best approach to Salonika is via the broad valleys of the Vardar and Struma, both within Yugoslavia's territory. If Hitler finds it necessary to go to war in the Balkans to achieve his objectives there the chances are overwhelming that he will move through Yugoslavia. And any agreement, however innocuous in appearance, that permits Germany to use the Yugoslav transportation system, would sooner or later mean military occupation of that country.

THE INDICATIONS remain that, despite the explosion of Yugoslav public opinion against signing any pact with the Axis, the Belgrade government is still determined to go through with the contemplated deal. But the fact that it has been forced to postpone this action again and again, despite Hitler's impatience and his invitation, shows that it has not been unwilling to make use of internal difficulties as a counter to offset external pressures. This Oriental game of bargaining has its limits. It may be that these limits have already been reached. But the delay has already made possible two developments of value to the Greeks and their British allies.

In the first place, Hitler must now reckon with a violently hostile public opinion in Yugoslavia which would negate much of the value of any agreement he might enter into with the Belgrade government. And, secondly, Belgrade's fortnight of equivocation has given the British time to send reinforcements to Greece. That fact may prove of not the least importance in the final outcome of the developing Balkan crisis.

What Britain Must Pay

By Ernest K. Lindley

Financing Old Orders

A CAMPAIGN has begun to relieve the British of the obligation of paying for war supplies ordered before the passage of the lend-lease bill.

The argument goes: The economic health of Great Britain depends partly on income from overseas investments. We want Great Britain to survive as a strong power. Therefore we must not "strip" it of its overseas properties.

The campaign is being waged chiefly by avidly pro-British journalists—with quiet encouragement here and there from official sources, both British and American. No one could blame the British for trying to take full advantage of our generosity. And some of our own officials and publicists have made it difficult for us to say "no" by calling this "our war," without adding that our interest in its outcome is far less direct than Great Britain's.

It may seem tawdry to speak of money when the British are fighting superbly for their lives, and thereby incidentally serving our interests. But plain speaking now may avert, in part, a repetition of the ill-tempered aftermath in Anglo-American relations of World War I.

The only reason the British have substantial investments in this country with which to pay for some supplies is that they failed to pay their World War I debt to the United States Government. The post-war argument was that they could not pay it because they could not get the dollar exchange. That contention, subscribed to by a high percentage of the economists of our country, has now been refuted. The British had plenty of assets that were readily convertible into dollars. Now they—or some of their friends—ask that they be allowed to keep these same assets because they are necessary to the "health" of Great Britain. This is something like saying that you will ruin the health of a multimillionaire if you take away part of his fortune.

THE CURRENT campaign so far has failed to move Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau. This is one of the best indications that it is ill-advised. For three years Morgenthau has been the most aggressive Cabinet advocate of aid to Great Britain and her allies and China. In recent months he has been criticized on the ground that he underestimated British capacity to pay. Certainly he does not favor "stripping" the British of their overseas assets.

But Morgenthau has insisted that the British pay for the materials ordered here before passage of the lend-lease bill. This, he estimates, will use up most of their investments in this country. The small remaining balance, plus future gold production, may be needed for miscellaneous purchases not handled through the lend-lease mechanism.

American taxpayers are going to pay large sums for weapons and food for British use. The longer the war continues, the more they will pay. In a few weeks Congress will begin consideration of another tax bill—and probably it will be a stiff one. Morgenthau has told the British that if they expect American taxpayers to shoulder this burden, British assets in this country must be liquidated.

British assets here are only a small part of their total overseas investments. Many of these assets outside the United States would be useful to us. There remain also investments of the British Dominions here and elsewhere, and investments of the British Allies, including the wealthy Dutch. The Administration so far has exhibited no interest in British investments outside the United States, although it may later request the transfer of a few properties in partial compensation for supplies provided under the lend-lease program. There has been no proposal in any responsible quarter to "strip" the British of their overseas investments.

UP TO JANUARY 1, 1941, the British Purchasing Commission had placed in the United States approximately $2,700,000,000 of orders. This included the costs of plant expansion. Since then, pending enactment of the lend-lease bill, the volume of new orders has been slight. Up to March 12 they had paid in cash a total of $1,682,000,000. This left a little more than $1,000,000,000 still to pay on old orders.

As of January 1, 1941, the British estimated their investments in this country as $816,000,000 in marketable securities, and about $900,000,000 in direct investments. The latter are all kinds of property holdings not represented by securities listed on organized exchanges. In addition, the British had about $360,000,000 in dollar balances, and admitted holding $292,000,000 in gold.

These are British figures. It appears on the record, therefore, that they have ample dollar resources with which to pay for their old orders, and that a substantial sum for contingencies will be left over. This is without taking account of future gold production, or any of the property holdings of the British Dominions and Allies or of any British holdings outside the United States.

The sum involved is small compared to the probable cost of the war to us. It is nothing compared to the stake which the British, or even ourselves, have in the result of the war. The easiest way to avoid unnecessary controversy is to rest quietly on Morgenthau's formula, which certainly is not ungenerous to the British.

Philippine Confidence

By Vicente Albano Pacis

War Jitters Fizzling Out

Manila.

ALTHOUGH almost surrounded by countries actually at war, from Australia to Japan itself, the Philippines remain the one spot in the Orient that refuses to succumb to the prevailing war hysteria. This peculiar behavior is due to two reasons.

One reason is the infinite confidence of the Filipinos in their powerful and benevolent Uncle Sam. They feel sure that, if Japan has any designs against their country, the United States will take care of Japan. And they know that if America has a mind to take care of anyone, whether Germany or Nippon, it will do a thorough job.

This abiding confidence derives from both physical and spiritual considerations. America has been sending and continues to send more airplanes, more warships and more guns to the islands. The Philippine Department of the United States Army has just doubled its strength by reinforcements from the mainland and by absorbing nearly 6,000 of the first class trained by the Philippine army under Gen. Douglas MacArthur. Only recently, United States High Commissioner Francis B. Sayre announced that in the event of an invasion plans were ready for the care of civilians, presumably their evacuation, housing and feeding.

Stronger in its bracing effect is the spiritual factor. It is not in vain that Filipino children since 1900 have been singing by heart such patriotic songs as "America, the Beautiful," "O, Say Can You See!" and others. They remember, too, that America has never lost a war. And when they hear she has appropriated $28,500,000,000 for armament, their American-given faith in what money can do completes their conversion.

Parenthetically, Filipinos read the American slogan, "In God We Trust," to imply that America's God is the money on which it is written. More: they implicity accept a modified version of the slogan, "In America We Trust," with connotation of gold, physical power, and Yankee pluck.

THE OTHER REASON is their belief that the Pacific situation is under fairly complete control. There is a stalemate which can only be broken if Japan moves first, but Japan will never move first.

"America will not attack Japan first," declares one commentator. "Britain will not attack Japan first. Neither the Dutch nor the French in the East will attack Japan first. On the other hand, Japan will not attack any one first because she attacked first in China and got mired for good and because Stalin might attack next from her rear and that would be fatal. Since no one will attack first—nor first commit an act that might be construed as casus belli—the so-called Pacific war will not materialize. The Pacific Ocean will continue to be pacific."

This feeling is shared by the majority of informed Filipinos, hence their comparative nonchalance may have cost them money. If they had been more war-conscious, as a local observer well pointed out, they might have wangled a substantial slice of the huge war chest in Washington in the form of a naval base or two. Had this happened, the local economic situation would have been saved from much of the effects of a warring world.

THE ONLY TANGIBLE meaning of the Pacific crisis to the Filipinos, so far, is an impaired economy. Because they lack bottoms on which to ship their exports to the fast-improving United States market, they lack money. Because of the same reason, and of the upward trend in American business, their imports—now almost exclusively American—are getting to be prohibitive in cost. Increasing freight rates and war risk insurance are doubling and trebling the price of even the most essential imported articles.

Even so, the Filipinos can afford to wait for the liquidation of Hitler and of the Eastern situation. They have no doubt that Hitler will soon be rendered harmless and his allies put in their right places and made to forget their respective obsessions and complexes. Certainly, the Filipinos dread nazlism and Japan's coprosperity and new order, but they are sure that insofar as they are concerned these threats are destined to remain only potential.

It may be the peculiar Filipino philosophy of "bahala na" (things will take care of themselves) and again it may be accurate Filipino intuition. Whatever it may be, it is saving the Filipinos from a lot of premature bother.

Hungry France

Decline Of A Land Of Plenty

(Ralph Heinzen flew from Vichy to Toulouse last Monday to investigate the food shortage in "starvation" areas of unoccupied France, where millions of people already are on short rations. In the following dispatch, first of a series, he reports on conditions in the Toulouse area on the basis of statements by French officials and personal observation.

Toulouse, March 23.—In this former land of plenty millions of French men, women and children went to bed hungry tonight.

Official sources asserted the number of people "facing possible starvation" is approximately 10,000,000, unless help is forthcoming from abroad—chiefly the United States.

A personal investigation by this correspondent showed that the food situation already is acute. That it will become worse during the next two months seems certain. Whether anybody will starve, however, is anybody's guess.

During the past week I have talked to scores of men, women and children. They agree, unanimously, that the outlook is black.

The official viewpoint is best summed up in the words of the Governor of the Province of Haute Garonne, whom I found in his office here bending over a farm production map.

This region, he said, normally has a food surplus. It had such a surplus when France collapsed before the German military machine last spring—and the surplus was divided with the rest of the country.

"We have had to starve ourselves so that other Frenchmen could eat," the prefect said.

"We probably could have got through the next harvest had it not been for the necessity of supplying others. Now we are near our end. We have kept 10,000,000 people alive but if, by April 1, we do not have help from abroad, or at least a promise of aid, we will face a drastic crisis.

The prefect, Chenaux de Leiritz, said he would go to Vichy the following day—March 19—to report to Vice Premier Darlan on that official's return from Paris. The vice premier, the prefect said, is holding a series of conferences with heads of the various provinces to find a solution of the food problem.

Following my conversation with the prefect, I toured the Toulouse area where, in pre-war days, tables of the well-to-do were filled with local delicacies as well as imports from Spain and Italy.

I found a great deal of penury and many cases bordering on famine.

The general opinion of the public was that if aid does not reach the free zone of France during the next two months, some people will suffer actual starvation.

A schoolmaster said:

"One of the worst features of the outlook is uncertainty. We know that we are eating up the last of our reserves. We have no assurances for the future and it is hard to control people when they see starvation coming for themselves and their children. There is a danger the people will take the distribution of what food is left into their own hands."

Said a farmer:

"Some of our people are eating grain they should be sowing in their fields. For them there will be no coming harvest. Nowhere can we find anybody who will be responsible for our next meal."

The population of the free zone of Fsance is about 15,000,000. I found general agreement among the people that two families of every three already are not getting enough to eat.

There was a universal complaint about the present reduced bread ration, for the people in this part of France traditionally consider bread the staple item of their diet.

If the present reduced ration, however, were cut by one half, the best figures obtainable show that there still would not be enough, based on the existing outlook.

On March 31 farmers must deliver their last sacks of wheat to government-controlled mills. A decree signed by the chief of State in Vichy provides for this. Failure means confiscation of the grain and punishment for the owner.

When that wheat is milled and baked, a mill owner told me, there will be no more. There are small amounts of corn in reserve, the miller said, but that has been blocked by the authorities, because it is needed for seed. There are no stocks whatever of barley, rye or oats.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Papers Of Private Purkey

Dear Mom —

I didn't get no chance to write you until late today becuz I was busy trying to make out whether I am being trained for a war, the Olympick games or a Swiss travelorg. The other day I was suddenly put on skis and taken across country for what turns out to be training in what is called a ski younit. At first I think maybe the war is over and the whole draft army is being broke up into a outdoor sports club. Another feller in my company thinks maybe the general has got news of very late winter and is just taking a few precawshuns. The other guys at the camp who don't get no skis just laf and make wise cracks like "Drop us a post card from Finland," and "Let us know what newsreel you get in."

We all feel silly wearing skis on both feet and loaded down with the usual equipment which makes it all the more mysterious becuz it don't make sense. If we wuz going to enter a ski jump contest we wuddent need no guns and if we wuz going to lern more about the emanuel of arms as usual we wuudent need no skis. But in the Army you do what you are told and if we wuz ordered to drill on racing skates it would be okay with us.

It turns out, after we have been skidding around the open spaces for a few days, that we are in a ski younit, which puzzles me, as in all the draft examinations nobody asks me am I any good as a ski jumper and never do I hear nothing about any American Army sliding around like Norwegian athuletes either in war or pease. Well, it all boils down to Uncle Sam is getting ready for anything this time and even a ski jumper with a machine gun ain't going to be no novelty. I think maybe it means I am going to be leased or lended for work in the Alps but the sergeant laffs this off and tells me it is all homework becuz if America wuz invaded a enemy mite drop out of parashoots in mountain country where there is ice and snow and it is best to get equipped now insted of being caught later on in a mountain blizzard with nothing but store shoes on.

Anyhow we get tooken out for snow hikes witch I do not like so much at first on account of I am flat on my back most of the time but when I get used to it I like it better altho the soarness that was in my dogs is shifted to my ankles. But it turns out to be more fun than walking and I do six to ate miles a hours on skies as against a coupple of miles a hour depending an shoes alone. It is swell fun on a down grade and if I ever get outnumbered by a ennermie I hope the pursoot takes place downhill.

One thing we test out in this unit is sleeping bags witch is something I only herd of befoar in connexion with eskeemose. It is pretty cold nights and we try out two kinds of bags one lined with down and one with hay. You will be serprised to here that we near froze in the ones lined with down and found the hay ones the warmest. I like the hay two becuz if the worst comes to the worser we can always eat it.

Well, I must close now as it is time to get into the bag agin, but anyhow I don't have to make no beds for the time bean. And anuther reason I like skis is that I can travel two fast for any camp doctors to catch up with me for more innoculashuns.

Your loving son,

OSCAR.

New Version of an Old War Song

We're lending-leasing now;
We're lending-leasing now;
Take off those sport clothes
And help stretch that hose!
We're lending-leasing now!

"Taxes are paid out of the sweat of every man's brow," President Roosevelt stressed in his first inaugural. And from now on your brow is going to look like Niagara Falls in full flood.

Altogether, Boys!

Yankee Doodle came to town,
But missing was his pony;
He said, "I lent or leased the nag,"
And cried, "Hey, nonny, nonny!"

Home Ports For Britain

IN THE DAYS before he left for his vacation, the President gave every available minute to studying how best to meet the German air and submarine threat to Britain's shipping life-lines, conferring repeatedly about it with Lord Halifax, Harry L. Hopkins and the chairman of the MaritimeCommission, Admiral Emory Land. He took with him aboard his cruiser a thick pile of memoranda on the subject. And on his return, when he will have had time to make up his mind, there will be important developments in the shipping situation.

ALSOP

Meanwhile, at least one big step has already been resolved on. Plans have been made to extend to merchant shipping the principle in the lease-lend bill, under which damaged British war vessels are to be received in American naval shipyards. New York, Baltimore and perhaps other suitable Atlantic coast cities are to be transformed into great marine depots for Britain, where the battered freighters of the convoys may be repaired, refitted, fueled and generally put in shape again for their dangerous task. Insofar as possible, all the work on the British ships that would normally be done at home will now be done on this side of the Atlantic. The major home ports of the British merchant marine will soon be in the United States.

THE REASON for this is to be found in the deep concern of the authorities here over the problem of Britain's west coast ports, which has lately worried our strategists even more than the problem of the Balkans. If the Germans win a victory in the Balkans, it will be bad. But if the Germans succeed in closing Glasgow, Liverpool, Bristol, Cardiff and Swansea, it will be disastrous.

For with the North Sea and Channel now too dangerous for Britain's convoys, the five ports on the west coast are the gateways through which Britain gets supplies from the outside world, and sends supplies to her armies in the Mediterranean.

In the past ten days the west coast ports have been the most frequent objectives of the intensified German air attack that marks the beginning of the new war crisis. The raids on them are the first, and perhaps the most dangerous phase of the German effort to cut off Britain from this country and the empire. And the raids have been very terrible.

They have been carried out by the new German four-engined heavy bombers, the Focke-Wulf Curiers, production of which in quantity is now believed to have been the purpose of the German air factory retooling in November and December. The Focke-Wulfs have far longer range and much greater bomb-carrying capacity than the Dorniers, Junkers and other medium bombers chiefly used by the Germans last summer. Because of their range, they can take off from their bases on the French coast, circle out beyond the British Isles, and thus in from the west over the sea, even at Glasgow in the far north. Thus interception is much more difficult. With their greater bomb-carrying capacity, using the new German incendiary which also explodes and so hampers civilian fire-fighting, they do worse damage. Finally, they are able to fly at an altitude beyond the reach of the Britain antiaircraft guns.

THE NEWS REPORTS have told part of the story of the destruction wrought by the raids. The bombing has been so serious that in one case temporary evacuation of more than 100,000 people was necessary. Fortunately, however, even after the grim experience of the last days, most American and British experts are convinced that the west coast ports cannot be wholly closed.

The main thing, therefore, is to reduce the strain on the ports as much as possible; and this is the purpose of the President's plan outlined above. A port's usefulness is measured by the number of ships it can handle in a given time. The time required for the "turn-around" of a ship is quite as important as the number of docks, since a port can handle three times as many ships if the average freighter takes a week to come in, be unloaded, and prepare to put out to sea again, than if it takes three weeks. Using New York and Baltimore as home ports, the British convoys need only unload and reload at Liverpool and Glasgow, saving the long time normally required for the work that will now be done here, and thus making the "turn-around" far quicker.

KINTNER

In order to speed up the truncated "turn-around" still further, British Minister of Labor Ernest Bevin has recently mobilized the British dockworkers to improve unloading and reloading methods. Then, too, the west coast ports are to be permanently relieved of all superfluous civilian population, and inland transport is being replanned so that goods pass through the ports more rapidly, and run less risk of destruction in the dock warehouses. Finally, the British night fighter force, to which the Focke-Wulfs are not invulnerable, is constantly being increased, and the bottleneck of personnel to work the secret night pursuit device is on the way to being removed. In short, the problem of the west coast ports, like most other major war problems, seems to be proving grave but not insoluble.

Spring Plus Parties Brightens D. C. Scene

By Elizabeth Henney

The official advent of spring during the past weekend, coupled with the brilliant sunshine and almost warm breezes, brought on a sudden blossoming of flowers all over town—on feminine hats. Poor old Mother Nature will have to struggle along for several more months to produce anything to compare with the show to be found in drawing rooms at teas yesterday afternoon.

Parties of all varieties crowded the calendar for Capitalites yesterday, and guests found themselves budgeting their time carefully in order to make the rounds.

To start off the afternoon, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Claude Wickard entertained at tea at their apartment in the Westchester. Their guests were mostly members of the press. During the same hours Paulo Hasslocker, Commercial Counselor of the Brazilian Embassy was being honored at a tea given by Miss Meredith Howard at Wardman Park Hotel's Madison Room.

Two parties held the spotlight for the evening in town, the dinner given by Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould in honor of the Rev. Dr. Joseph Code and Mrs. Evelyn Walsh McLean's dinner at her estate Friendship.

Miss Ann Wickard Assists at Tea

At the Wickard tea, Mrs. Wickard and the Secretary received their guests in the foyer of their apartment. Mrs. Wickard was gowned in a floor length model of frosty green crepe, fashioned on simple lines and accented with tangerine buttons and earrings to match. The daughter of the house, Miss Ann Wickard was busily seeing to it that every guest was supplied with everything desired in the way of edibles or drinkables from caviar to tea or sherry. Miss Wickard, who wore a navy and white two piece spring print, accented her dark hair with a spray of fresh gardenias.

The tea table, centered with a low bowl of pale yellow roses, was lighted by four tall white tapers. Assisting during the afternoon were Mrs. Mark Thistlethwaite, Miss Katherine Brooks, Mrs. Harold Brayman, Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mrs. William C. Murphy, jr., Mrs. John C. O'Brien, Mrs. Brian Bell and Mrs. Ray Tucker.

Noted during the afternoon were Mr. and Mrs. Mark Foote, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Clapper, she in black with matching turban and silver jewelry; Mr. and Mrs. Ernest K. Lindley, Mr. and Mrs. Bulkey Griffin, she in navy with blue blouse and huge navy picture hat; Mr. and Mrs. George Bell, Mr. and Mrs. James Lloyd Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Brayman, she in lightweight wool suit; Mr. and Mrs. Walker Buel, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Henry, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kintner and Carter Barron.

Diplomats, Officials At Mrs. Gould's

Diplomatic and official notables made up the guest list of Mrs. Gould's dinner for Father Code. They included the Ecudorean Ambassador and Senora de Alfaro, Sir Gerard and Lady Campbell of the British Embassy, Princess Boncompagni, Lady Broderick, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Britten, Mrs. Arthur Pack, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Senator James J. Davis, Senator George L. Radcliffe, George Vournas, and Lyle Kennedy.

A brilliant company was gathering during those same hours in the flower-banked drawing rooms of Mrs. McLean's home on Wisconsin Avenue. Following one of her famous dinners, the guests were treated to a full-length movie shown in the ballroom of the home.

Mrs. McLean's guests included Mrs. George H. Earle, wife of the Minister to Bulgaria, who is Mrs. McLean's house guest, Ambassador and Senora De Espel, Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, Mme. Procope (the Minister is out of town), Mrs. Mitchell Palmer, Representative and Mrs. Martin Dies, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Trent, Representative Patrick J. Boland, Senator Henry Ashhurst, Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, Mrs. Gwendelyn Ffoulke Dewey, Dona Julia Brambilla, Mr. and Mrs. Max O. Truitt, William G. Elmslie, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Essary, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Taylor, Lieut. Simonds Carlton Putnam, Harry S. Shaffer, Mr. Van Dusen, General and Mrs. R. L. Maxwell, Senator R. B. Russell, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Railey, Mrs. Nelson Miles, Senator and Mrs. Alben Barkley, Mr. van Swingeren, Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Representative Lawrence Lewis of Colorado, Mr. and Mrs Kurt Hetzel, Mr. and Mrs. Huntington Cairn, Bulgarian Minister and Mme. Naoumoff, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Waldrop, Joseph Hergesheimer of Westchester, Pa., Representative and Mrs. John Dempsey, Mrs. Lionel Atwill, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mr. and Mrs. Eliot Wadsworth.

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

THE BRITISH NAVY isn't afraid of anything, not even of columnists. I refer to newspaper, not Fifth Columnists, though the Royal Navy takes them in its stride, too, as witness the recent raid on German-held Norwegian island. The other afternoon at the Raymond Lees' cocktail party I met British Rear-Admiral Danckwerts and, because he talked so heartily about his wife, five children and one grandchild back in England, I felt inspired to confidence and told him that "I am a 'columnist'." Instead of leaping away in the opposite direction, Admiral Danckwerts said, "Well here's a story for your column." And a very funny story it was, though I fear it won't see print.

Admiral Danckwerts expects to be in the United States for a prolonged stay although he frankly admits he would rather be nearer to his family and the Battle of Britain. "And," he added with a twinkle, "people in Washington are getting so used to seeing British admirals that I don't get enough attention." This statement appeared to be strictly untrue as Admiral Danckwerts was at that moment running a close second to Washington's own Admiral "Jerry" Land as most popular man in the room.

At the Lees' party people settled comfortably on sofas for conversation while every imaginable drink and delicious hot hors d'oeuvres appeared on silver trays. Mrs. Lee was slender and pretty in a black velvet tea gown with a gold-embroidered yoke, seemed to have a special interest in each of her guests. Gen. Lee, too, was seeing as much as possible of his friends that afternoon, as his leave at home is growing short.

GEN. LEE arrived from London along with Lord and Lady Halifax on the battleship King George V—known familiarly to the British as the "K. G. Five"—and Mrs. Lee gives an amusing account of the mystery surrounding his homecoming. It seems that she was informed by telephone to be ready at a certain time to follow a certain car to an unknown destination to meet an unknown person. This was all very delightful to Mrs. Lee, but then came the task of persuading the cook to prepare a very extra dinner with caviar for an unknown person at an unknown hour, and of persuading a chauffeur with a hankering for road maps that he must follow a strange car on a route that was merely a question mark.

Among those glimpsed at the Lees' charming Georgetown house that afternoon were Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings, she looking beautiful in a dark blue frock with a huge white frill and wearing a tiny white hat, the Military Attache of the Swedish Legation and Mme. Vessel, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Emory Scott Land—to give the admiral his official name—Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wilmer, Mrs. Frederic Schenck, Pendleton Turner, Griffith Warfield, Admiral R. M. Bellairs, of the Royal Navy, and a good many more.

Mrs. Schenck is a newcomer to Washington who has taken a house on Tracy Place and she is taking care of her baby granddaughter for the duration of the war. Mrs. Schenck's daughter is married to David Huxley, half-brother of Julian and Aldous Huxley, and a cousin of Michael Huxley. Mrs. Huxley has remained in England to be near her husband and is working at the United States Embassy in London.

MEANTIME MRS. SCHENCK, with Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis and a number of other ladies, is working on the American Committee for Catholic Relief. A tea is being planned for Friday at Mrs. Eustis house when C. Gouveneur Paulding, literary editor of the Commonwealth, will explain the aims and plans of the organization. Funds will be raised for mobile chapels which will be used, with practical Christianity, as canteens between services, and the committee hopes to interest charitable people who have not yet chosen the relief organization with which they wish to work.

A popular visitor to Washington is Mrs. Benjamin Riggs, who has come from her home outside of Philadelphia with her two children for a bit of sightseeing. Mrs. Riggs' husband is in the Foreign Service and is stationed at Suez. The other afternoon Eric Taff gathered a few of Mrs. Riggs' friends together for a cocktail party way of welcoming her to Washington. Mr. Taff's little apartment reminds one of Montmarte with its open fireplace and view over the rooftops of Georgetown. Among those at this pleasant reunion were Mme. Andor de Hertelendy, Mrs. Prentiss Gilbert, Baroness van Boetzelaer, Samuel Reber and Jacob Beam.

Yates Tavern to Be Included On April 19 Old Houses Tour

Among the Alexandria taverns of note that flourished in the late eighteenth century was Spring Gardens or Yates Tavern, where the proprietor, Abel Willis, informed his friends and the gentlemen of Alexandria that he intended providing oyster suppers on the most moderate terms and the shortest notice, and there should be nothing wanting on his part to give general satisfaction.

This house at 414 Franklin Street is loaned by the owners, Col. and Mrs. W. H. Peek, to be shown by the Alexandria Association during the Tour of Old Houses from 11 a. m. to 5 p. m. on Saturday, April 19.

Washington often frequented this tavern, and in his diary from time to time, he refers to Spring Gardens or Yates Tavern. On one occasion, Gen. Washington celebrated Independence Day here with a party of Alexandria gentlemen, and laconically entered in his diary of 1798, "Expenses for Independence, one pound four."

Tickets for the tour may be purchased in Washington at the A. A. A., Seventeenth and Pennsylvania Avenue; Keystone Auto Club, 1643 Connecticut Avenue; Mayflower Hotel (Mr. Foster), and in Alexandria at the George Mason Hotel, Washington and Prince Streets; the Anchorage, 603 Queen Street; Collingswood Tea House, Mount Vernon Boulevard or at the first house visited.

Alexandria was noted for its taverns. In them the gentlemen of the town were wont to gather for an oyster supper, a turtle feast, or a cock fight. Here the coaches changed horses; the mail was collected and distributed; sailors could find a berth; the stranger warmth, food and forage for his horse.

In 1753 at a court held at Fairfax, the rates "for a night's lodging with clean sheets, 6 pence, otherwise 3 pence. For a quart of punch with loaf sugar, 1 shilling, 3 pence; for a quart of punch with brown sugar, 10 pence. For a hot dish with small beer or cyder, 1 shilling; for a cold dish, 4 pence. Stablage and fodder for a horse for 24 hours, 6 pence, pasturage for 24 hours, 4 pence." It was ordered that "the several and respective ordinary keepers in this county do sell according to the above rates in money or tobacco at the rate of 12 shillings and 6 pence per cubic weight, and that they do not presume to demand more of any person what so ever." Thus were the rates for lodging, forage and liquers fixed by the court.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Harrison Cage, who are now on their honeymoon South, will make their home in Washington. The former Miss Rebecca Estell Kammerer, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Kammerer of this city, and Mr. Cage were married Saturday in the Hamline Methodist Church. The Rev. Harry W. Burgan officiated at the afternoon ceremony. Mr. Cage is the son of Mrs. Alma Cage of Brentwood, Md.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Morton Belmont Kammerer, was gowned in a powder blue redingote with accessories to match, and carried an arm bouquet of yellow roses and lily of the valley.

The bride's sister, Mrs. Robert E. Rice, was the matron of honor and only attendant. She wore a dusty rose redingote with accessories to match and carried an arm bouquet of mixed spring flowers.

Charles R. Ourand was the best man and the ushers were George Jackson and Robert E. Rice.

When the couple left on their wedding trip following the ceremony the bride was wearing a costume of black and a corsage of orchids.

Mr. and Mrs. Morton B. Kammerer entertained for the bridal couple at a dinner party following the wedding rehearsal on Wednesday.

Wives' Clubs Plan Benefit

Mrs. Roosevelt heads the list of sponsors for the benefit matinee which the wives' club of the Department of Agriculture have arranged for 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, in the department auditorium to raise funds for "Bundles for Britain."

Lady Halifax, wife of the British Ambasador; Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Vice President, and Mrs. Claude R. Wickard, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, will also act as sponsors for the affair which is unique in that facilities of a Federal agency will be made available to raise funds for another democracy.

Two Government films, "The River" and "This Heritage We Guard," will be shown at the matinee which is open to the public. No admission charge will be made but a collection will be taken from the audience for the British cause.

Lady Chalkley, wife of the Commercial Counselor of the British Embassy, will be present at the matinee and will act for Lady Halifax, who will be out of the city on the day of the benefit matinee. Mrs. Redvers Opie, wife of the First Secretary of the Embassy, also expects to attend.

Members of the committee arranging the benefit have adopted as their slogan "Carloads of Aid for Britain." They are urging that persons interested in the "Bundles for Britain" movement come and bring a carload of friends to the matinee. Independence Avenue in front of the South Building of the Department of Agriculture, where the auditorium is located, will be blocked off for the parking of cars for matinee patrons.

Wives of the heads of all the bureaus within the Department of Agriculture have been asked to help in arranging plans for the benefit matinee. The committee which is looking after details is composed of Mrs. C. F. Clayton, chairman; Mrs. Paul Appleby, Mrs. M. H. Wilson, Mrs. Morse Salisbury, Mrs. H. H. Bennett, Mrs. H. R. Tolley, Mrs. R. M. Evans, Mrs. Milton S. Eisenhouer, Mrs. Clarence Kitchen, Mrs. C. L. Forsling, Mrs. W. R. Chapline, Mrs. Dillon Myer, Mrs. E. W. Gaumnitz, Mrs. Marshall Harris, Mrs. Howard Middleton, Mrs. E. A. J. M. Collinses on Bridal Trip; Will Live in Alexandria

MRS. J. MARVIN COLLINS

MR. AND MRS. J. Marvin Collins, who are in Florida on their wedding trip, will return in a few days to make their home with the bride's mother, Mrs. Louis F. Bohraus, in Alexandria. Mrs. Collins is the former Miss Dorothy Bohraus. Mr. Collins is the son of Mrs. Louise Collins and the late Mr. Collins.

The Rev. Welner D. Mensing, pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, officiated at the candlelight ceremony, which took place Friday evening, March 14, at Mrs. Bohraus' home. Palms, ferns and white blossoms decked the spacious rooms of the Colonial home, and the couple exchanged vows before an improvised altar lighted with cathedral candles and flanked with tall baskets of white blossoms.

GIVEN IN marriage by her brother, Louis F. Bohraus, jr., the bride was gowned in white satin, fashioned princess style with a sweetheart neckline and long sleeves closely fitted at the wrists. Her veil of tulle and lace followed her train, and her flowers were a shower of lilies of the valley and white roses.

Mrs. Herbert Baument, of Washington, was matron of honor. Her gown of blue taffeta, was made with a quaint bodice and a full skirt, and she carried an old-fashioned bouquet outlined with a lace frill. A headdress of matching blossoms further accented her attractive costume.

Walter Densmore was best man.

A reception for 125 guests followed the ceremony, and later Mr. Collins and his bride left on their wedding trip.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

PIEDMONT FOX HOUNDS, Dr. Archibald C. Randolph, M. F. H. held the last meet of the season on Saturday morning at "West View," the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Robert Slater, near Upperville. The Hunt has had a wonderful season of sport and Saturday's meet was a gala occasion with a large field out, including many visitors in the country for the weekend and the point to point races, winding up the hunting for the spring season.

Meeting at 10 o'clock they had two hours of great sport which everyone made the best of by enjoying the run. They stayed out only two hours as they had to be back to go to one or the other of the numerous luncheons given at 12 o'clock before the point-to-point races which took place at 2 p. m.

AMONG THOSE hunting was Paul Mellon, over whose estate the races were run; also Mrs. Elizabeth Altemus Whitney, who had two horses running in events. Miss Mary Rumsey was also hunting on Saturday. She has just arrived at her Virginia home, near Middleburg from Sun Valley, where she has been for a long visit. Miss Rumsey will get in some days hunting with Orange County Hunt, before the season is over.

Mr. and Mrs. George L. Harrison and her sons, Cary T. Grayson, jr., and William Grayson, entertained some of their friends for luncheon before the races. Among the guests were several of the Grayson boys' friends from Yale who came here for the day's sporting events. Blue Ridge Farm looked most attractive and homelike and the family is enjoying several weeks' vacation there.

COL. AND MRS. John C. Butler were among others who gave a large luncheon at their attractive home, "Kelvedon Farm," before the races. Among their guests were numbers of people from Warrenton who dropped in for refreshments en route to the point to point races. Dr. Cary Langhorne also entertained many friends for luncheon. Numbers of his guests were from Clarke County en route to the races.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bower, who started out to give a buffet dinner party on Saturday evening celebrating his birthday, gathered so many guests for the occasion that they turned the party into a dance—many coming later on from other dinner parties.

MR. AND MRS. Paul Mellon entertained at a large and gala tea at the Red Fox Tavern, in Middleburg on Saturday afternoon after the point to point races. Their guests included many people from the Piedmont territory and neighboring hunts, who had a delightful time, many lingering on after the dinner hour.

This week many people will recuperate from sporting events by "taking off" to the far South to meet the spring. Miss Nannie Fred and Mrs. Robert Booth motored together to Charleston, Mr. and Mrs. Barry Hall and their two children, Nancy and David, have also headed in that direction, and in a few days Col. and Mrs. John C. Butler and her mother, Mrs. Lenhart, of Nyack, N. Y., will leave for Williamsburg, motoring on to Charleston and other places of interest.

MRS. MARY LIPSCOMB Jamison and her cousin, and house guest, Mrs. John Whiteley, of California, entertained at a supper party last night at Mrs. Jamison's home Wind Ridge, near Manassas. Several of their friends from Washington motored out to Virginia for the party.

Mr. and Mrs. William Seipp have as house guests at Brook Hill, near Middleburg, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Turner and their two children, Alice and Daniel Sands Turner, who have just arrived in America from Tokyo, Japan, where he is secretary at the American Embassy. Mrs. Turner was formerly Miss Jennie Green, a niece of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Sands, who taught at Foxcroft School for several years before her marriage and spent much time in this part of Virginia.

In the all-American spirit this Yankee Doodle dress goes to town. Though it's a pert junior dress, done in tri-color, the style is very adaptable to a grown-up young woman. Light bands brighten the jacket and accent the neckline and pockets of the dress. The fabric is a novelty rep containing Eastman acetate rayon and teca that stays fresh and doesn't wrinkle. The tricorn adds the dauntless, courageous spirit of youth. It's the type of a dress you'll find yourself wearing for any occasion—for street wear, to the theater for tea or just sight-seeing

How You Can Save Face—It's a Chinese Art

YOUR FACE should look as fresh as a crisp new organdie blouse—that is if you expect to wear the spring styles with aplomb. If it doesn't, you need to do a little rejuvenating. Probably what you need most is to tone the muscles and restore them to their proper place.

There are more than 50 muscles in the face, and talking uses only 14. Smiling takes four major muscles and brings 11 others into play. The muscles of the cheek and jowl, which are most important to youth and beauty, are not used sufficiently in any of these movements to keep them firm. When the muscles resting on the cheekbone sag, the line from nose to mouth is deepened; and when the platysma—the fan shaped muscles of the jaw—become flabby, loose or embedded in fat, it gives an appearance of age and leads to a multitude of chin troubles. The platysma should be above the jawbone, and heavy jowls results when this muscle is out of place. Age is portrayed by the position of the muscles.

When a face sags or looks old and tired, due to sudden loss of weight, to illness or to age, it isn't the skin of itself that is sagging, but the muscles under skin pulling the whole structure down.

But sagging muscles can be toned and lifted without actually cutting the face. Even features that are distorted by accidents or sickness can be restored to their natural place. There's nothing new about this muscle lifting. It's a Chinese custom—5,000 years old.

No instruments are used. It is done entirely with the fingers, using a cerate (soft salve) to supply a smooth well lubricated working surface. Extremely relaxing, you go to sleep while the expert is working.

One local concern specializes in this type of beauty treatment, which recently has been introduced here. In order to give a truly effective treatment to the face and neck all the neck and facial muscles are agitated. Operators concentrate on the areas where time has played the most havoc. They not only work the muscles but the nerves and arteries that surround the muscles. The technician at this establishment emphasizes that beauty is not only skin deep—but it is muscle deep, nerve deep and circulation deep.

Mary Haworth's Mail

'Shrewd, Wicked Old Maid, So Homely as to Seem Repulsive,' Breaks Up Attractive Young Wife's Home; Sick With Shock and Grief, She Asks Help

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am so heartbroken and bewildered I cannot go on much longer. Three years ago I divorced my husband (whom I had loved with all my heart) because he wanted a divorce and had given me all the grounds necessary. He was madly infatuated with another woman,—not a young and foolish girl, nor a beautiful, glamorous sophisticate, as you might imagine, but with a shrewd, wicked old maid,—so indescribably homely as to appear repulsive. To the amazement of all who knew him, he married her. No one seems able to fathom the hold she has on him, for it is quite evident they are not happy.

When I met him, he always behaved as a perfect gentleman, although (at that time) he was very poor and without a job. I had a well-paid position, and after we were married, I managed to meet expenses until he found suitable employment, after which we both worked and saved considerable money which we invested in a home. Our home was extremely comfortable and immaculately well kept and he never tired of praising my delicious cooking and excellent housekeeping. I was attractive looking, always smartly dressed, a good dancer and popular hostess, and sufficiently versatile to hold my own in any gathering.

There was no incompatability. From the time we met, we never had a misundersetanding and never exchanged an unkind word. Our tastes were the same in everything. All our friends called us "an ideal couple." I considered it a privilege to work for his happiness, and was proudly loyal to his name, which he has since disgraced.

Then he became involved with this woman. She came to my place of employment at the beginning of their affair and made sordid scenes. She threatened me, and threatened to expose him to public scandal if I didn't release him. In shame and humiliation I left my job and later spent all my savings on doctor bills, trying to regain my health.

Now I have another good position, but I am so lonely. I have politely shunned all our former friends, because when they see me they always mention him and I want to forget him as much as possible. I have lost faith in everything and lury myself in educational books, wondering if it is worthwhile to try to piece the fragments of my life together again.

I am still young, but so hopeless. I have the advantage of a sound, healthy mind, a strong body, a good, unselfish disposition, and the ability to earn a comfortable living. But the only things I have ever wanted in life are true love and friendship—and these I have never found. Please help me if you can. Sincerely yours,

VERA.

One's Mental Attitudes Shape One's Fortunes

DEAR VERA: It seems to me the natural, peaceful solution of any problem of heartbreak, disillusionment or emotional deprivation must be found through continuing spiritual or social growth, which transforms one gradually into a different person than one was when the calamity struck, and thus releases one from the feeling of crying need for what seemed indispensable to one's welfare or contentment in that earlier day. Your backward-looking moaning and breast-beating are somewhat comparable to an hysterical householder's settling down in the ruins of a home destroyed by fire, instead of getting ahead with the business of procuring or constructing another (and perhaps a bigger and better) house in which to "live and move and have his being."

One chapter of your life is over and done with. Very well. Turn the page. Stop poring over that segment of experience with tear-filled eyes. Pull yourself together and get out among people, weaving new associations into your present and future design-for-living. That martyr's performance of "politely shunning old friends,"—no doubt the only friends you had, at the time,—lest they revive memories of your former husband, has been self-defeating nonsense. If they were sufficiently your friends to be willing to rally around you in the desolate period following your divorce, you should have gratefully encouraged their support.

What really prompted your withdrawal was "hurt pride" I suppose; a shamed feeling that you "couldn't bear to face them," when, so you thought, they were looking upon you as a woman who "couldn't hold her husband." In other words, then, you have been steadily losing ground for lack of courage to face facts and cope with them gallantly, resourcefully and with a saving element of humility.

If you are as fine a person as you represent yourself to be, and your victorious rival as low-grade and repulsive as you say, then surely the man must be, in essence, more like her than you, or he wouldn't have discarded you in favor of her. In your brief happiness with him, you must have been living in a "fool's paradise," in which he was playing a false role for the selfish purpose of enjoying the material benefits you heaped upon him,—until he tired of the make-believe and turned to a creature who as the saying goes, "speaks his language," and who, with all her faults, nevertheless satisfies the essential vulgarity of his nature.

In his splendid book, "The Sermon on the Mount," Emmet Fox makes the point that what truly belongs to us cannot be taken from us, and, also, that we cannot permanently identify ourselves with those persons or things that are intrinsically alien to our nature, no matter how hard we may try to possess them securely. He also speaks of "poverty consciousness"—that attitude of mind by which we cut ourselves off from the good things of life, through assuming we are fatefully prohibited from experiencing them. This seems to be your attitude of mind at the moment; and perhaps has been for years.

Thus, it is probable that a change for the better in your affairs can only be wrought by changing the (shall we say?) climate of your "consciousness." When you bring to your experiences a sincerely serene expectancy of love and friendship—instead of the nervous fear that they must forever elude you—it is entirely likely you will be rewarded in accordance with that faith.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Arrange Furniture For Harmony

The whole decorative effect of many rooms is ruined because the owner has no experience in arranging furniture. Before you decide to push and pull the furniture around to try and learn what the "wrong" is, sit down and list everything you think is not right.

Here are some reasons why your decorative effect may be all wrong:

Because furniture is set catercorner to the lines of the room. This arrangement not only wastes valuable floor space, but also spoils the sweep of the walls and windows, and injects a restless, ring-around-the-rosy atmosphere. Very often the divan or sofa is the chief cater-corner offender.

Because two matching chairs are not used as a pair when they should be.

Because the occasional tables—lamp tables, cocktail tables—are in the wrong sizes and heights for the furniture they serve.

These are but a few of the reasons, but in whole it means that the room lacks harmony and imagination as well as convenience and comfort.

You Can Row Your Way To Beauty

By Ida Jean Kain

CURVES are so much lovelier than angles that it's out of style to be skinny. Figuratively speaking, you thin girls would give a lot for a figure like Lana Turner's or Betty Grable's.

Poor shape is directly owing to the dearth of well-toned muscle over one's bones. Besides the general building-up measures of sun, fresh air and a nourishing diet, you probably need specific exercises which will fill out the hollows in the chest, round out too thin arms, and give better contours to thighs and legs.

If you want to see a real improvement, take up rowing. If you have a lake handy, by all means get out and row on it. Your next best bet is to purchase a rowing machine—you can pay almost as little or as much as you please for one. One celebrity who rowed in her living room every day for a few minutes succeeded in adding more than an inch to her bust measurement. Besides improving the chest and arms, rowing tends to give you a flat stomach.

Try Swimming Stroke

Or, in lieu of rowing, pattern your set of special exercises after the back and breast strokes in swimming. Circle the arms up in front, around in back and down, with wide swings from the shoulders to bring the entire shoulder girdle into the movement. Or hold the arms straight out in front and, keeping them at approximately the same level, swing backward. If you were a good swimmer, you wouldn't have any hollows.

With the swim suit season in the offing, you may be concerned about thin thighs — sometimes these hollows are so pronounced the legs have a bowed appearance. Here is a special exercise which will help to overcome this figure fault and will also strengthen the abdominal wall.

Lie on the side on the floor with the under arm pillowing the head, the other hand out in front on the floor as a brace. Raise the upper leg from the hip high in air, keeping the knee straight. Hold for a second and lower. Repeat five times, then turn over on the other side and repeat with the other leg. Relax completely for a few minutes, then, in the same position on floor, go on to this one:

Relax Afterward

Raise upper leg about 18 inches from the floor and hold it there as you raise the other leg up to it so that legs are together in air, and hold for a second. Relax and repeat three times, rest, and turn over on other side to perform same number of times.

To develop the legs, dance on toes in the bare feet for about 10 minutes every day.

The rhythm of exercise and relaxation is important to you. Rest between each exercise and always finish an exercise by shaking the tension out of your muscles. When you have finished, lie down completely covered and try to relax completely for 15 minutes.

Streamlined Desk

An amusing new desk for a school-age boy will appeal to the would be pilot. It has a built-in radio and a pair of propeller design lamps. The desk itself is streamlined and finished with linen weave plastic.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Women I Have Never Met

The one who the minute she is feeling blue dashes out and buys the first silly hat she sees to bolster her spirits.

(On the contrary, she faithfully saves the price of a hat out of the grocery money over a period of weeks and then trots to every store in town trying to get the right hat for the least money.)

The one who at sight of Clark Gable or Robert Taylor immediately becomes hysterical and fights her way through several thousand other women until she reaches her hero and tears off a piece of his shirt.

(Rather she stays home and reads about the alleged mad cavortings of her sex, and thinks "aren't women silly!")

The one who always faints in a courtroom just as the high point of the sensational testimony in a divorce suit or murder trial is reached.

(Not on your life! She leans eagerly forward in the front row, all her ears about her so as not to miss a word.)

The rattle brained one who is pictured in plays (and especially by play reviewers) as being so utterly charming and appealing that despite her lack of logic and irrelevant chatter everyone loves her.

(Nobody loves her—either on the stage or in life. All women, and most men, want to brain her.)

The silent aloof one with an air of mystery who without even flickering an eyelash draws all the men in a huddle around her at parties while her striving-to-be-pleasant rivals are left chattering among themselves.

The one who moves slowly and serenely through life never hurrying no matter what emergencies impend, and who gets just as much—if not more—done than the woman who rushes madly around.

(If she gets it done, it's because somebody else does it for her.)

The little woman with an innate sense of style who by shopping wisely in bargain basements looks just as chic as her Park Avenue sisters.

(That propoganda was put out by the Husbands' Protective Association. If you don't believe it, ask any Best Dressed Women.)

The clever housewife who systematizes her work so well that she can serve a five-course company dinner perfectly and be in her seat virtually all of the time during the meal.

Yes, if her menu includes only canned salmon and potato chips.)

The one who travels anywhere and everywhere with only one suitcase and is always properly attired for everything from a garden party to a game of leap frog.

(Yes, with the aid of a couple of large hatboxes and an overnight case, and with some express boxes waiting for her at her next stop.)

The one who is so utterly helpless that if anything should happen to her husband, nobody knows what would become of her.

(How about a little elbow grease behind a lunch or a notion counter?)

The one whom the European lecturers tell about as being spoiled.

Fantastic Tales

Rumors and fantastic stories continue to fly around art circles regarding the disposal of the Hearst collection of antiques and art treasures. One amusing tale about his Spanish monastery relates that the dismantled stones were originally wrapped for shipment in some type of burlap which was not admitted to the United States because it was regarded as a carrier of foot and mouth disease. So each stone had to be rewrapped at enormous expense . . . the monastery is now being offered for sale at about the cost of this rewrapping job.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

U. S. Lawyers Waging Fight on Ramspeck Bill

Employes of the Federal Reserve System and of the Federal Land Banks won't be covered under Civil Service in the anticipated Presidential order making the Ramspeck Bill effective. It 's been decided that neither of these agencies is "wholly Government-owned" as specified under the Ramspeck Bill. The proposed executive order remains bottled up at Justice. Meantime, an undercover scrap is underway to modify the order. Politicians and some reformers have banded together in an effort to prevent the jobs of lawyers being covered under merit. And the latest bit of information gives them better than an even chance to keep attorneys out, at least for the time being.

Ross Pope, son of the TVA chairman, is leaving FCC where he was budget officer. He's going to Federal Works where he'll set up an accounting system for defense housing projects . . . Civil Service will soon distribute a booklet on opportunities for chemists in the Federal service . . . A Midwesterner, applying for a defense job, wrote in part: "I was once up in the world, now I'm down to 30 acres and a wooden leg" . . . Census has 192 clerks verifying age and citizenship of an average of 5,000 defense workers each week.

The rumor that the President will order a longer work-week for Federal employes as an example to private industry, is without basis for the moment, say White House advisers. However, they admit that it is a possibility. The report is believed to have been inspired by the President's recent speech, in which he said that we'll all be called on to work longer hours. It's a fact that an order to work longer hours would merely make general what employes in some agencies have been doing for months.

Boss' 'Stagger Hours'

An official who works an average of 70 hours a week had this crack to make about the new "staggered" hours for Government workers:

"These so-called 'stagger' hours don't mean much on must jobs, when one must breeze in at 8:30 and eventually stagger out at 8 p. m. or later."

General Accounting Office has been added to the long list of defense agencies. This means that persons on the replacement list can be hired at G. A. O. . . . Carl Berger will have his boss, J. Darlington Denit, GAO official, on his radio program tonight. The program is heard over WINX at 9:05 o'clock . . . AFGE District Council has seated Mattie Wallace, Rena Pinto and Ed Moline from the Tariff Commission lodge . . . F. B. I. has more than 16,000,000 sets of fingerprints in its files.

A new unit is being set up by Treasury in the Washington Building to sell National defense bonds. It's hiring employes. Civil Service is required. Eugene Sloan, who has sold millions of "baby bonds," is in charge. Gale Johnston is chief of the distribution section. Vincent J. Callahan heads the radio division.

Wayne Coy will be missed at Federal Security. He was the agency's ace on administrative problems . . . USHA employes are complaining about being moved to the old building near Nineteenth and New York Avenue . . . Charley Jackson, chief of the fish division of the Fish and Wildlife Service, is en route to Cuba to make a speech . . . Forty-one Civil Service Commission employes have been called to military service within the last 18 weeks. One of the first to go was George A. Bonnet, now Lieut. Col. Bonnett, personnel director of the Selective Service System.

New Civil Service registers established and the number of eligibles on each: rural sociologist, 9; senior grade, 5; associate 31; and assistant, 58; psychophysiologist, 28; senior, 28; principal, 33; associate, 31; and assistant, 55; assistant plant geneticist, 25; land grant freight rate clerk, 268; land grant passenger rate clerk, 45; freight rate clerk, 2,957; passenger rate clerk, 933; express rate clerk, 840, and pullman rate clerk, 247.

Civil Service jobs: Meteorologist, any specialized branch, with salaries ranging from $2,600 to $5,600. Supervisor of education, $2,600 to $3,200, and teachers of industrial arts and of remedial reading, $1,800, National Training School for Boys. Senior instructor in saddlery and leather goods, $2,600. These jobs are open at Camp Lee at Petersburg, Va., but application can be made with the manager of the Fourth Civil Service District.

Goat Has Taste For Books

A postman on the Conduit Road run returned to his truck after a delivery to find a goat in the back contentedly chewing on a magazine. The mail carrier was disturbed by this case of tampering with U. S. Mail, but he relented when the goat's owners, Mr. and Mrs. George Graham of Glen Echo, offered their own copy of the magazine as payment.

'Where There's Smoke—'

While driving his car near Twenty-First and S Streets Southeast yesterday, Wallace R. King, 28, of 1103 South Carolina Avenue Southeast dropped a lighted cigarette To retrieve it he applied his brakes suddenly. He was thrown against the windshield cutting his forehead.

While police took him to Casualty Hospital, firemen put out the blaze in his car.

Natural Gas Limit Won't Affect D. C.

Utility Commission Will Continue With Plans to Cut Need For Artificial Product

The Federal Power Commission acted yesterday to limit the use of natural gas as a conservation measure, but, Federal and local officials agreed, the action will not affect the District's move to obtain a 100 per cent natural gas system.

Currently, 75 per cent of Washington's gas is piped 440 miles out of wells in Kentucky; the remainder is manufactured by the Washington Gas Light Co. Consumers receive a mixture of the two gases.

Last November, an expert investigated the local gas system at the request of the District Public Utilities Commission and submitted a report which declared use of 100 per cent natural gas would bring about an immediate saving of $745,129 per year in gas bills here.

After studying the report and opposition arguments offered by the gas company, the utilities commission was considering taking the first step in direction of complete natural gas. This step would involve requesting the Federal Power Commission to lower the cost of piping the natural gas by a third.

Senate Action Awaited

However, the death last month of Commissioner Riley E. Elgen left the P. U. C. without a working majority since there already had been a vacancy through resignation on the three-man board. All P. U. C. decisions must await Senate confirmation of the President's appointment of Gregory Hankin. A P. U. C. official said last night there was little doubt that the commission would carry out its original plans.

The Federal Power Commission's report yesterday on natural gas conservation said:

"Careful study of the entire problem may lead to the conclusion that use of natural gas should be restricted by functions rather than by areas."

Gas Heats 18,000 Homes

Thus, the report pointed out, natural gas "is especially adapted to space and water heating in urban homes and other buildings."

Washington qualifies for the use of natural gas, a P. U. C. official observed, since 18,000 homes here are already heated by gas. He asserted that lowering of gas fuel rates would considerably increase the number of home heating consumers.

To the suggestion that an increase in gas consumption here would hasten the depletion of the natural gas reserve in the Kentucky fields, the official replied that an enlargement of the market would inevitably stimulate discovery of new natural gas deposits.

Fellowships Granted to 2 Librarians

They are Dr. Lewis Ulysses Hanke, director of the Hispanic Foundation of the Library, and Dr. Edward Prince Hutchison, demographer.

Dr. Hanke's project, under the award, is to study the Spanish discovery, exploration and administration of America. Dr. Hutchinson will engage in research into the socio-economic significance of population.

Dr. Hanke was born in Oregon City, Ore., was educated at Northwestern University and Harvard and served on the staff of the University of Hawaii, the American University at Beirut, and Harvard. Since 1939 he has directed the Hispanic Foundation.

Dr. Hutchinson, born in Maine, was educated at Boydoin College and Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and for two years was a fellow of the Social Science Research Council, studying in Sweden and England. He is a member of the Harvard faculty, at present on leave at the library.

In all, 85 fellowships with grants of funds totaling $180,000 to assist research and creative work in 1941-42 by American and Canadian scholars and artists were awarded. Last year 73 fellowships were granted, and 58 were awarded in 1939. There were more than 1,400 applicants.

Committee Forms For Cooperation InDefense Housing

Formation of the National Committee on the Housing Emergency, to further cooperative action by private and public groups in meeting the housing needs of defense workers and families of low income, was announced here yesterday by Mrs. Samuel I. Rosenman, of New York, following a conference on housing matters.

The new committee includes representative leaders in business and the professions, as well as those active in trade, civic, housing and welfare organizations throughout the country. Temporary offices have been opened at 6 East 45th Street, New York City, and it is planned to establish a headquarters here. Mrs. Rosenman is chairman of the committee and Albert B. Ashforth, jr. is treasurer.

As outlined by Mrs. Rosenman, the committee is a temporary organization for the period of the emergency, the purpose of which is not only to aid in meeting the housing needs of defense workers and low income families, but also to coordinate the efforts of persons and groups concerned with these problems both in and out of the housing field.

Hadassah Celebrates Drive's Success

Nearly 1,600 persons attended the seventh annual Hadassah donor dinner and dance last night at the Mayflower Hotel celebrating the organization's completion of its current drive for funds.

Dr. Oscar I. Janowsky, associate professor of history at the College of the City of New York, told the group that in the past year "the American people have experienced a great awakening."

In a discussion of the international crisis he said, "Every inhuman effort applied to the Jews has been applied to other peoples."

Appealing for world-wide cooperation in the cause of individual freedom, Dr. Janowsky said, "Non-cooperation among the nations was the cause of our present plight. The statesmen failed to see that our world is one single unit."

"When a Jew is tortured in a German concentration camp, when a Chinese is driven off his land, the cause of individual liberty is threatened throughout the world."

Mrs. Moe Offenberg, president of the Washington Chapter of Hadassah, presided at the dinner gathering. Rabbi Isadore Breslau spoke briefly on the successful completion of Hadassah's campaign to raise funds for sufferers abroad.

Guests of honor included Chayele Grober, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin S. Francke, Mr. and Mrs. Isadore Bregman, Mr. and Mrs. Julius H. Wolpe, Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Koonin, Mrs. Harry Levinson, Mr. and Mrs. Simon Hirshman, Miss Jessie Breief, Dr. Ivy Pelzman, Mr. and Mrs. Leopold V. Freudberg, Mrs. Isadore Kahn, Mrs. Isadore Breslau.

Washingtonian Killed in Crash Of Motorcycle

John Ten Eyck Tucker, 24, of 3816 Windom Place Northwest, was fatally injured last night when he lost control of his motorcycle and was tossed headlong into a ditch 8 miles north of Lynchburg, Va., on Route 29.

Apparently there were no eyewitnesses, State Trooper L. F. Payne, of Amherst, told the Associated Press. C. N. Young, of Boone Mill, driver of a transfer truck, found the youth in a 3-foot ditch. Resting on its left side, the motorcycle came to a stop a short distance away on the hard surface.

Tucker, carried to Lynchburg General Hospital, was pronounced dead of a fractured skull.

Tucker had returned for a weekend trip to visit his mother, Mrs. Adelaide Tucker. Surviving beside his mother, is a sister, Mary Ann Tucker, of the same address.

He had been employed by the War Department at the Hercules Powder plant at Radford, Va., for only a few weeks. He was a graduate of Catholic University in the class of 1939.

Symphony Gives Repeat Performance

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra on Sunday afternoon in Constitution Hall, with Percy Grainger as soloist. Program: American Festival Overture (William Howard Schuman), Suite (Corelli), Piano Concerto No. 2 in G minor (Saint-Saens), Symphony No. 3 in D major (Chaikovski).

Save for a single composition and a different soloist, yesterday's concert by the National Symphony Orchestra was a replica of the one with which the tenth season was opened last November. On the former occasion, Sergei Rakhmanimov was heard in his second concerto, and his place in the repeated program was taken by Percy Grainger, who selected for his sixth appearance with the orchestra the second concerto of Saint-Saens. For the repetition of the other three works there were two good and sufficient reasons: they were all worth hearing again after their introduction by Hans Kindler four months ago, and they have all been recorded by the orchestra under its first contract with Victor.

BROWN

William Howard Schuman's "American Festival Overture" justifies both the adjectives by its exuberant vitality and its boisterous merrymaking. It fails of being completely American, however, by its lack of a single memorable tune, for if there is one thing that the average American likes to hear in music, it is a tune which he can whistle. Either Mr. Schuman neglected to put such a tune in or, more probably, left it out on purpose because memorable melodies seemed to him trite and in disaccord with the principles of modernism.

The suite of three movements arranged by Dr. Kindler from violin sonatas by Arcangelo Corelli fell soothingly on ears that had been irritated by the dissonances in the overture. Corelli was not among the innovators of his period (1653-1713) and excluded from his compositions whatever was not easily playable on the violin. His conservatism has been explained by the fact that his own technique as a violinist did not extend beyond the third position. His music is concise and lucid, earnest and sincere, and these are the qualities that have given it longevity.

Percy Grainger, who defies the passage of time with his unquenchable zest for life and seems on the stage to be not a day older than when he came to this country 25 years ago, played brilliantly in the Saint-Saens concerto. His forthright reading of the piano part, virile in the command of plangent dynamics and tonally suave in the poetic passages, pleased the audience so highly that he was recalled nine times in all. On two of his returns to the platform he answered the applause by playing his "Colonial Song" and his arrangement of "Country Gardens."

Chaikovski's third symphony, after years of neglect, appears to be on its way to join the fourth, fifth and sixth in popularity. Now that it has been recorded by Dr. Kindler and his musicians, it stands an even better chance of permanent resuscitation. Thoroughly characteristic of the composer in style of instrumentation and in melodic charm, it contains none of his pessimistic broodings. The introduction in the tempo of a funeral march and the elegiac slow movement are merely emotional devices of romanticism, and have no relation to temperamental depression.

Youth Held In Slaying Of Woman

Suspect Arrested In North Carolina Charged With Murder In D. C. Shop Holdup

A 20-year-old colored man was arrested on a murder charge last night in connection with the holdup shooting February 15 of Mrs. Fannie Cohen, 56, in her dress shop at 1512 U Street Northwest.

Detective Chief Bernard W. Thompson said William T. Mulford, 20, of Washington, for whom a murder warrant was issued five days after the slaying, was apprehended in Rockingham, N. C.

Detective Sergt. Aubrey Tolson will leave for Rockingham today to return the man to Washington.

Arrested February 18

Thompson said the arrest followed the distribution by Washington police of fingerprints and photographs of Mulford which they had obtained from Greenwood, S. C., police. He had been arrested there Febreary 18 for investigation but released before Greenwood police learned he was wanted here.

Mrs. Cohen, who lived at 1419 R Street Northwest, was about to close her store when she was confronted by a colored gunman. She screamed and he fired, killing her instantly. A liquor store delivery boy, the only witness, saw the shooting through the glass door.

On the home crime scene last night, police apprehended three alleged thieves a few minutes after a holdup and a pocketbook snatching.

Woman Robbed of $5

Two white men, 22 and 23 years old, were caught by Sergt. James Gosnell and Private J. E. Glick at the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge, where they lay in wait for the thugs, who had fled the scene of a holdup in a yellow coupe.

The men were held for investigation of the holdup of Mrs. Madge Kump, 45, of 1508 Potomac Avenue Southeast, who was robbed or $5 as she walked her dog near her home.

Detective B. F. Bean, of the First Precinct, chased a 17-year-old colored boy after he heard Olivia White, of 1229 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest scream when her pocketbook containing $5 was snatched at Fifth and K Streets Northwest. He caught the boy four blocks away.

Frequencies Shift Seen Bettering Radio Reception

By the Associated Press

Improved reception will result from the readjustment of standard broadcast frequencies, effective at 3 a. m. (E. S. T.), March 29, experts predicted yesterday.

The shifting of frequencies, which results from the North American regional broadcast agreement, will involve 795 of the 883 standard broadcast stations in the United States.

The correlated shifting of the frequencies of some 100 stations in Canada, and of numerous stations in Mexico and Cuba, officials of the Federal Communications Commission said, will eliminate to a considerable degree interference from these sources.

Interference from Mexican and Cuban stations has been particularly objectionable to rural listeners, they said.

The principal noticeable difference to the average listener will be that his favorite station above 730 kilocycles will occupy a slightly different place on the receiver dial, usually higher.

Two Salesmen Leaving Tonight On Prize Jaunt

George E. Harris, 6212 Georgia Street, Chevy Chase, and Herbert Goodman, of the Cavalier Hotel, will leave tonight for Miami on the first leg of a trip to Cuba awarded to them for being among 20 salesmen of the Remington Rand Co. to win the third annual salesmen's contest.

Harris, associated with the company for 25 years, is executive secretary of the District of Columbia Organized Bible Class Association, vice president of the National Federation of Men's Bible Classes and a member of the executive committee of District Sunday School Association.

Harris and Goodman will sail Wednesday nigh. for Cuba and will have the Boston Red Sox for traveling companions.

Bishop Speaks At Hamline Anniversary

Approximately 800 persons occupied the auditorium of the Hamline Methodist Church yesterday in a service celebrating the seventy-fifth anniversary of the dedication of the church's first building.

Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, resident Methodist prelate, spoke on "Demand for Plain Truth," taking his text from John xi:14: "If Thou be the Son of God tell us plainly."

Bishop Leonard declared, "The bigger the truth the more difficult it is to explain it in words." He cited Einstein's theory of relativity and the philosophy of Mahatma Ghandi as illustrations of subjects it is difficult to sum up in a few words.

"Important as words are there is such a thing as experience in life being more significant than anything a word can convey," he said.

Dr. H. W. Burgan, pastor of the church, conducted the service of worship.

An American flag, displayed at dedication ceremonies of the church's first building at Ninth and P Streets Northwest, stood in the church yesterday. Also on display was the spade with which President Coolidge broke the ground for the site of the present structure at Sixteenth and Allison Streets Northwest.

At vesper services yesterday afternoon the Hamline choir presented the oratorio, "Hora Novissima," by Horatio W. Parker.

The Hamline Church was organized July 2, 1865. Following the erection of a frame building for a church at Ninth and P Streets Northwest in 1866, a new brick structure was erected on the site in 1873.

In 1924 Hamline Church merged with Iowa Avenue Church, and the merged church retained the name of Hamline. President Coolidge broke ground for the present edifice on July 28, 1924.

Dr. Harry Evaul, associate pastor with Dr. J. T. Herson at the time of the merger of the two churches and now of Hagerstown, Md., will speak at services to be held next Sunday. The young people of the church will present a drama entitled "The Lost Church" at 8 p. m. next Sunday.

School Beautification Group to Hear Report

The committee on beautification of school grounds will conclude its five-year program of activities at a meeting a week from tonight in Roosevelt High School. Mrs. B. G. McIlwee, chairman of the committee since its organization in April, 1936, will review the group's accomplishments.

Pastor Urges All-Out Aid To Christianity

"The International crisis is really the church's crisis" the Rev. Edward Hughes Pruden, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Sixteenth and O Streets Northwest, told his congregation at the morning service of worship yesterday.

"Vital Christianity is not presen tin all men," he said. "Thus, while helping Great Britain is important at the present time, it is also important to aid the cause of Christianity throughout the world."

He discussed the background of the international situation, pointing out that "we are living in a time of international crisis when free institutions and democratic principles are being threatened."

The American people have agreed that aid to Britain is essential, Dr. Pruden said. "But the only ultimate guarantee of the preservation of civilization that we now have is all-out aid to Christianity throughout the world," he added.

Scout Training Classes

A series of three meetings in leadership training under the Boy Scouts Emergency Service Corps will begin at 7:30 p. m. today at Scout headquarters, 1727 K Street Northwest. The study periods will be held weekly on Monday nights for scoutmasters and other scout leaders.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Maureen O'Sullivan Is To Prod Greek Relief

Noted Film Star Arrives in Capital Tomorrow; Gala Midnight Show Coming Along Saturday; This, That and the Other About the Theater

MAUREEN O'SULLIVAN, distinguished young screen star, is the most recent Hollywood acquisition to be articled to aid the local National Greek Relief Drive. She will arrive in Washington tomorrow by plane and tomorrow night will be guest of honor at a combined Washington Greek Societies dance to be lightly tripped in the Mayflower Hotel.

BELL

There is scarcely a theatergoer alive, privy to the better things of the cinema, who needs an introduction to Miss O'Sullivan. She has been the "Mrs. Tarzan" through a long line of jungular romanticisms with Johnny Weissmuller, under the aegis of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Most recently she was seen as the bewildered young socialite, with Ann Sothern, in "Maisie Was a Lady"—and Maisie was.

But antedating all that and initiating her American screen career, Maureen came to this country from her native Ireland to appear as "leading lady" with her brilliant compatriot with the platinum voice, John McCormick. I would not be sure of the title of this introductory screen appearance of Miss O'Sullivan, but it seems to me it must have been something like "Song o' My Heart." After all, no memory should be expected to hark back with any accuracy whatever to a year so long ago as 1929. In that year, however, there was another crash as notable as that of Miss O'Sullivan's of the American "movies." It seems unworthy of mention that Maureen's popularity, ever since, has topped that of the depression.

Miss O'Sullivan's presence in the Capital tomorrow night will be only preliminary to the major event on the books to culminate the Greek Relief Fund campaign. The thing will reach its apex in the Capital Theater on next Saturday night, March 29, when a gala—and how we hate that abused but seemingly inevitable word—midnight performance will be presented, according to latest word from Zone Manager John J. Payette, of the Warner Brothers interests in the Washington territory, and I. E. Fanaken, Washington manager for Paramount Pictures, chairman and cochairman, respectively, of the goings-on. The Saturday midnight bill will combine the lusty talents of all those participating in both the Earle's and Capitol's stage frollics. These would include the Singing Fowers Models, Joe and Jane McKenna, Mayay and Brach and the Rozyettes, from the Earle and the full roster of talent from the Capitol—meaning Paul Haakon, one of the foremost of the contemporary dancers; Alan Gale, The Honeys, Frank and Jean Hubert and the Rhythm Rockets. Eileen Ritter and Art Brown will team up in a joint exercise of that "Sing-a-Song with Mike" business. Both house orchestras, with Sam Zack Kaufman and Jo Lombari alternating on the podium, will have a finger and lot of fiddles and some tomfoolery in the jamboree. There is not a picture house in Washington at which you cannot buy a ticket for this effulgent evening, at the flat price of one buck. Which is by way of being the more elegant way of saying a dollar. The show will be worth five times that.

A couple of esteemed critical voices to the contrary, notwithstanding, we still think "Nice Girl?" currently on the screen at RKO-Keith's, comes dangerously close to being Deanna Durbin's best picture. There seems to be a lurking mass opinion to the same effect. "Nice Girl?"—and I still think that interrogation point is utterly foolish—ran ahead of "Spring Parade" by something like $400 on Friday and $300 on Saturday. By that barometric box-office, we venture the notion that this wholly delightful picture will be available to the Durbinites on Fifteenth Street until along about Easter. It will have to come off then through sheer force of other mandatory bookings.

An early Sunday morning, too long distance, "Goodby-good luck-and-God-bless-you" telephone conversation with Tallulah Bankhead—all the way from here to the Mayflower—unearthed the fact that due to the inexplicable vagaries of the booking offices Tallulah's projected week of benefit performances for the victims of the aggression nations is dead off. Time, place and circumstances seem to be the determining factors. Miss Bankhead is closing her tour in "The Little Foxes" in two weeks, to be followed by a long period of rest following one of the most arduous road tours any star ever made. I suspect that the rest—if that is what it's going to be—will be principally in that opulent new Cadillac "Taloo" purchased while she was here last week.

And that sort of disjoints Ann Corio's anticipation of playing the "Subway Circuit" and a Broadway theater for the early summer. She was to have followed Tallulah around the shortdistance wheel as Tondeleyo, in "White Cargo." As things stand now, Tallulah won't be there to follow. But Ann, one of the most intelligent, level-headed and charming girls that ever rambled onto the "smoker circuits," isn't through with burlesque. She loves it, the sturdy troupers she works with and the people she meets. The last thing she told me ran something like this: "Certainly I'll be back in burlesque. I have not deluded myself into the crazy idea that I am another Katharine Cornell. They like me in 'White Cargo' and I like them —but I like a lot of other people, too, and will be back." Ann also has given burlesque two weeks' notice. "White Cargo" will open May 12. Ann Corio is the only strip-teaser I know who can strip you of any inclination to tease her.

Flutter-of-Those-Wide-Wings Note

And don't forget to remind me to tell you about Master J. Raymond Bell (no relation), his adorable wife, Virginia "Butch" Bell, and that latest tiny tinkler, Bonnie Rae, who arrived just in time to usher in spring. Doctors' Hospital Thursday night at 10:10. Everybody doing well but father.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 23 (INS). Kay Francis, who has handled her career more sensibly than anyone I know, has signed a contract with Darryl Zanuck to play the leading role opposite Jack Benny in "Charley's Aunt." I say Kay has been sensible because in a little picture she made called "Play Girl," you see her first dressed to the teeth going out with very young men and you wonder how come. Then it is explained that she is two years older than her fiance's mother. Any girl that can kid her age and not pretend to be sweet 16, deserves a break.

PARSONS

At 7 o'clock yesterday a. m., Private Jimmie Stewart got in a street car and departed for a training camp. Jimmie can well be proud of the farewell reception given him by Louis B. Mayer. Every M.-G.-M. star was on hand, from Lionel Barrymore to Mickey Rooney, to say au revoir. Joan Crawford, all done up in a new outfit bought just for the occasion; Lana Turner in bright red, accompanied by Tony Martin; Cary Grant, who came from another studio; Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Myrna Loy, Bill Powell, Judy Garland, Rosalind Russell, Lavinia Day—every M.-G.-M. favorite except Greta Garbo.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Reports from Chicago are that Lois Andrews (Mrs. George Jessel) collapsed on the stage in Chicago. The Jessel heir is due in September; Alice Faye sails March 27 through the canal for New York; Mark Hellinger cut a birthday cake in the shape of a book at Ciro's, where his bride gave him dinner; Marlene Dietrich and Joe von Sternberg also Ciro's diners; Helen Vinson, who was formerly wed to tennis champ, Fred Perry, returns here for Bob Hope's picture "Nothing But the Truth."

George Burns' brother, Bill, welcomed a third child—a little girl, last week; Ellen Drew and Cy Bartlett are house hunting; Jane Novak, pioneer actress, is out of the hospital and ready for a movie job which we hope she will get; Leroy Prinz, dance director, is the latest Hollywood moviette to be drafted. He is a major in the reserve and has been ordered to March field; Sylvia Fairbanks and Norma Shearer are expected home tomorrow. They were delayed in flying home on account of weather.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Trans-Lux Offers Newest War Close-ups

The prize war pictures to date are being shown at the Trans-Lux Theater, for the current week, where they were rushed from the Atlantic clipper. These uncensored shots show the thrilling British raid on the Lofoten islands, off the coast of Norway, where the Nazis held great stores of oil and other supplies. These pictures taken from aboard the attacking British ships leave nothing to the imagination. Probably most impressive of all are the Norwegian traitors being taken prisoners, as contrasted to the 300 loyal Norwegians and their wives who had run the oil refineries for the Germans while prisoners. Back to England they went to be greeted by King Haakon on British soil.

Topping the news on this side of the Atlantic is the dedication of the new National Art Gallery by President Roosevelt, followed by Col. "Wild Bill" Donovan's return from his unofficial 25,000-mile inspection of the war zones. Defense activities include the graduation exercises of Uncle Sam's largest class of living cadets at the basic training school, Maxwell Field, Ala.; the initial training at Camp Edwards, Mass.; marsh-eval warfare at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga.; new huge powder plant being erected at Radford, Va.; new assault tactics at Fort Belvoir, Va., and new trucks being given the mind tests at Fort Meade, Md.

In the world of sports the events run the gamut from the Duke of Windsor refereeing a golf match at Nassau to the first hunting dog train in Minnesota. Thrown in are such events as the big bowling tournament at St. Paul, Minn.; snipe boat regatta at Tampa, Fla.; basketball thrillers at Madison Square Garden and a snow fight at Fredericksburg, Va., with the girls in bathing suits, many getting their first real winter.

Story Purchased For French Star

"Joan of Paris," an original by Jacques Thiery and Georges Kessel, has been purchased by RKO-Radio as a starring vehicle for Michele Morgan, star of the French stage and screen recently brought to Hollywood under RKO contract.

Miss Morgan has appeared in many highly successful French films, including "The Storm," in which she played opposite Charles Boyer, and in "Port of Shadows," for which she is best known in the United States.

MUSIC DEPT.: "Stars Went to Sleep," a BMI tune, is one of the current hit songs. Last week Paul Baron, the Essex House band leader, received a letter from one of the authors of that song. It read: "Please pardon this intrusion, I am both proud and thankful that the song I collaborated on was accepted by Broadcast Music, Inc., which recently sent complete orchestrations and professional copies to every leader and vocalist of consequence. Writing like this begging you to plug the tune—may not be what professional song writers call The-thing-to-do. But they're not in the same spot I am. Having my song attain popularity means a great deal to me—perhaps even my freedom. Lyrically yours, Merritt March, Prisoner No. 37074, Oklahoma State Penitentiary."

RADIO DEPT.: Elizabeth Gould, who returned from Paris last week, was the only American enrolled at the Conservatoire of the Comedie Francaise. Until the Nazi occupation, Miss Gould broadcast a children's program for Radio Paris . . . After France fell, the new rulers of Paris employed Miss Gould to continue those kiddie broadcasts, at the same salary as before, as part of the Kultur program . . . "It is understood, of course," said the new radio official, "that there is to be no suggestion of German influence" . . . "No German influence! Very well, then," Miss Gould agreed. "And how will I be paid?" . . . "You'll receive your money," said the official, "in marks."

SONG DEPT.: When Irving Berlin sang "God Bless America" at Constitution Hall in Washington he motioned to the audience to join in the second chorus . . . The audience all rose and sang with him—all except one lady, seated in the President's box. "Come on, sing it," the lady was urged—while Berlin kept leading the chorus of people in his thin, piping voice . . . "I can't. I don't know the words," said the lady—who thus was the only one silent in Constitution Hall that night. She was Rise Stevens of the Metropolitan Opera.

FINANCE DEPT.: Larry Adler played his harmonica before the President last week and then was invited to make a tour of the White House. Claunch, the White House usher, brought him first into the Cabinet room, which just had been vacated by the Cabinet officers . . . Adler saw a piece of paper on the table. It bore a penciled memo: "25, 75, 135" . . . "Tell me," he asked the usher, "does that represent hundreds, thousands or millions" . . . "In these days," was the reply, "you never can tell."

LOCAL NEWS: Dick Rodgers, of the songwriting team of Rodgers & Hart, is becoming a producer. He's bought the rights to "Pal Joey," by Martin Gosch & Howard Harris . . . The President's appointment of Davis, Mezey and Harrison, to his National Mediation Board on Wednesday, was announced here on March 3 and 17 . . . Bubbles Schinasi, heiress to the Schinasi tobacco fortune, will be the new model for the Arcelon cigarette ads . . . The New York Stock Exchange's George G. Brooks, jr., a native of Scranton, has applied for a radio station there, through David G. Berger, his FCC counsel. Brooks told the FCC that Scranton is dislocated economically now, and can use the station as a Forum for Labor and Capital, in creating new industries.

BOOK DEPT.: Alexander Woollcott, Carl Van Doren, Sinclair Lewis and Clifton Fadiman organized the Readers Club—a plan wherein subscribers receive one book selected by them each month. The books are those which have been published before, but for some reason failed to attract the attention they merited . . . The four men decide by listing ten books each month, in the order of their preference. The book which receives the most votes, in their rankings, is the one finally selected . . . Lewis phoned Van Doren, who said: "Fadiman just sent in his list. His list of ten books is 11" . . . "Oh, that's nothing" said Lewis. "My list of ten is 17."

In Hollywood

Hollywood, March 23.

Babies are the biggest gambles in pictures—and the darnedest little scene spoilers in the business. They may do their scenes beautifully, and on the other hand, maybe all heck can't get them to act when the time comes.

HOPPER

Anne Shirley is going around right now with a black eye presented to her by a very sweet little two-year-old girl playing in "Little Miss Muffet." The child was wonderful in her test, but when the scene started, she brought up a haymaker that caught Anne right in the eye. On the second take of the scene, the lady repeated her eye-socking performance with dispatch. "I'm going to go into animal pictures," Anne said, squinting at me out of her good eye—"or serials, or anything where the risks aren't so great."

Eleanor Powell was rehearsing her dance steps one day for "Ready Be Good" when in and behold, fluttering, a mongrel dog belonging to a prop man, started cavorting with her, which gave Director Norman McLeod an idea for her dance with the dog. They've written the dog into the script, and he'll go throughout the picture. Boy, Eleanor—are you looking for trouble!

Yesterday Myrna Loy handed a wedding ring back to the prop man, who looked rather incredulous and said, "What's this for?" "Well," said Myrna, "if you'd looked carefully at my left hand, you would have realized I haven't worn your ring at all in this picture, because I slipped my own back on my finger, and didn't need the prop one."

Arthur Sheekman, who was one of our best writers till there came a lull in his life here, and his wife, Gloria Stuart, who could only get B pictures, left about two years ago for New York, where things didn't go as well either, but he wrote a play called "Mr. Big," which Sam Harris will produce and George Kaufman direct. And now Hollywood is shaking in its boots for fear the play will really tell about Mr. Big of Hollywood!

That Tony Neah from New York, who "it seen everywhere with Mike Romanoff, is a cinch to get a movie offer. Incidentally Mike's place has become one of the most popular rendezvous in town, and no wonder. It's cozy, informal, and the cuisine excellent.

Well, you may think you've seen a loving couple, but until you do an interview with Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz, you ain't seen nothin'. Boy! That isn't hot—that's burning . . . Kyle Crichton delighted Betty Gvable's friends by saying she was the most intelligent actress he had interviewed here. And some of our people think she just has a pretty face.

Remember Beverly Bayne of the silent picture days? Well, the other day she was heard on a radio serial and drew 600 fan letters. And yet some people claim fans are fickle!

Now that they're reshooting seven scenes in Orson Welles' "Citizen Kane," it's interesting to know what's happened to his leading lady, Dorothy Comingore, since they began the picture two years ago. She started "Citizen Kane" as a newspaper, has since had a baby, and now does the rebirkes as a happy mother. Incidentally, she gives a great performance in the picture.

I wonder why M.-G.-M. quietly shelved "Bombay Nights," Louis Bromfield's prize-winning novel, after months of preparation on the script?

PAUL DRAPER,
one of the greatest of contemporary dance artists, who will appear with his aunt, Ruth Draper, celebrated diseuse, in a joint program, opening a week's engagement at the National tonight

Master of Dance

Gayety

The winning "daily double" combination at the Gayety this week is almond-eyed Amy Fong and the clever Allen Foster Revue.

Better known as the only Chinese girl in burlesque, Miss Fong is the personification of all that is mysterious and lovely from the land of lotus flowers and Fu Manchu. Amy's musical specialties and beauty parades are, indeed, novel, and somewhat different from those of her stage sisters.

In Bob Ferguson, the circuit boasts one of the funniest comedians to appear at this house. His lines are clever, original and laugh-provoking to the last word. With his charming partner, Mary Murray, and the assistance of Max Coleman, another droll chap, the wit abounding from this production is tops. Incidentally, we might add that Miss Murray is about the best comedienne ever seen at this theater.

Gypsy Nina, Cleotoris and Mildred Perlee form a trio of lookers who have much to offer in the song and dance line. Miss Perlee, in particular, is an unusually talented ballet dancer.

Combat Engineers: Fighters and Builders

A detail from Company B, First Engineers, marches with shovels to a road-building project. When engineers aren't learning to build or destroy they learn soldiering.

By George Thorpe
Post Staff Writer

TWENTY dungaree-clad soldiers crouched in a line, their bayoneted rifles pointed at canvas dummies strung across a drill field at Fort Belvoir, Va.

"Thrust," ordered a sergeant.

Fort's New Water Tower

"New men . . . bayonet practice," an officer explained.

He spoke of rookies attached to Company A, First Battalion, of the Fifth Engineers.

At the same time new men of Company D, of the same battalion, marched — but with shovels instead of guns —at Belvoir's camp and as yet unfilled, selectee replacement center on U. S. Route No. 1, near Alexandria, Va.

THE activities of Companies A and D serve to illustrate the duties of the Corps of Engineers, and of 10,000 Selective Service trainees who will don uniforms at Belvoir by June.

"Work . . . and fight, too . . . and never rest."

This was the definition of Col. R. C. Crawford, Belvoir's commander.

He meant that besides learning to shoot a rifle and use a bayonet the engineers are responsible for road and bridge building, demolition with explosives, construction of entanglements and tank traps, and camouflage.

Necessarily, therefore, selectees being assigned for training at Belvoir and the Nation's other engineering replacement center, Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., must be men of special aptitude.

OFFICERS used the following examples for illustration: a colonel wanted some trees planted and some sketches drawn. Immediately, a call for volunteers produced a landscape designer and a former commercial artist.

A company commander who had found three former practicing attorneys in his unit said he intended assigning one of them to fill out his income tax.

Belvoir is distinctive in another way. While construction delays at other replacement centers have thrown the draft programs weeks behind schedule, 643 barracks, for 7,000 white and 3,000 colored trainees, have been completed well ahead of the building deadline.

TODAY the strength of the fort, spread out over 6,200 acres 20 miles south of Washington, has arisen from a pre-emergency 1,850 officers and men to approximately 6,500. By June it will number nearly 20,000 regulars and selectees. And perhaps before then the fort's 6,200 acres will be enlarged still more, through purchase of 1,900 acres northeast of the present reservation. This is expected to cost the Government about $664,000.

While trainees are learning the rudiments in the 13-week primary training period before being transferred to engineering posts elsewhere, officers will be put through parallel drilling.

AMONG the brick structures of the permanent post near the Potomac is the only military engineering school in the country with courses in map reproduction and surveying, drafting and water purification.

Here, too, is an engineering board, devoted entirely to developing engineering apparatus and technique, matters that make the engineering selectee's soldiering a highly technical business.

The golden cat is locked up tight,
Which doesn't seem exactly right,
Because his conduct's of the best,
As Morton's keeper will attest.

Rare in zoos and little known,
Morton's kind calls Asia home;
Here since nineteen thirty-four,
His nose, from rubbing bars, is sore.

Ah! Now we know why Uncle Sam
Guards him well, so he won't lam;
Gold's embargoed, more's the pity!
And is not Mort a golden kitty?

Nelson's 276 Wins Greensboro Golf Title

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 23.—Don't stop me, because you have never heard this one before. The American League pennant will not be won this year. With our customary brightness, we have just reached that conclusion after careful thought on the subject. One by one we have scanned all the clubs, and we can't find a pennant winner in the lot.

POVICH

They all have their drawbacks. The Yanks are gambling on four infield positions; the Indians have got to lick their own temperament first; the Tigers and Nats are being bedeviled by Uncle Sam's draft boards; the Red Sox don't know where their next winning pitcher is coming from; the Browns need catching; the White Sox don't have an infield, and the A's aren't going to win the pennant anyway.

The Yanks are attempting what seems to be an impossible parlay—the gamble that three men can step into new infield jobs and make good. In the past they have been spectacular by introducing new second base-shortstop combinations like Lazzeri and Koenig, and Gordon and Crosetti, but this time Joe McCarthy may be over-reaching himself.

"He's asking his second baseman, Gordon, to play first base, and he has given over the second base and shortstop jobs to two lads who have never played a game of big league ball—Jerry Priddy and Phil Rizzuto. Not only that, but his third baseman Red Rolfe, is being agonized by a strange eyelid ailment. And lurking ominously in the background is Uncle Sam who threatens to take Rizzuto for his Army before he makes his first major league double play.

The Tigers, too, are trembling at the signs that the United States Army will claim Hank Greenberg at any moment. If it does, then the Tigers may as well content themselves with their pennant memories, because Greenberg carried the club on his back last year. That's a thought. Perhaps that's where he got his flat feet, because the Tigers were an awful load. Particularly with that ancient infield. Even with Greenberg, the Tigers don't fit any preseason conception of a pennant winner.

Cleveland will have to be clever enough to defeat not only the seven other clubs in the league but its own tendency to lick itself before it can win any pennant. The Indians definitely are the club that is on the spot. Because of their cry-baby antics last season, they will be the team which the other clubs will delight to beat. They'll be subjected to more torment from the benches than any club in the league.

Anyway, the Indians don't seem to have what it takes. A great infield, yes. A swell pitching staff headed by Bob Feller. Right. But a horrible sort of outfield whose lack of punch cost the club last year's pennant, in the final analysis. Roy Weatherly the only .300 hitter in the 1940 Cleveland outfield, is now so fat it's funny, and Gerald Walker's recently acquired presence to the Cleveland outfield may be neither greatly decorative nor utilitarian. We don't like Cleveland.

We'd like to see the Browns win the pennant, but that's too much to expect. They have a lot of good ball players, but not quite enough of 'em. They can have swell pitching with such as Elden Auker, Kennedy, Harris and Johnny Niggeling, whose knuckle ball is second only to Dutch Leonard's. But they don't have a catcher of any account whatsoever, and there isn't quite enough power on the club.

The White Sox are a nice sort of ball team, but you can get 20 to one against them in Jack Doyle's book. Those cries for help that are being heard in the night, are Jimmy Dykes' frantic pleas to be succored from his infielder shortage. He doesn't know yet who will play second and third base for the White Sox, and he is fearing the worst. Anyway, the White Sox power isn't going to take 'em very far.

Washington is also in the league. But even Clark Griffith isn't predicting any pennant for the Nats. And if Uncle Sam steps in and takes Buddy Lewis off third base and out of the clean-up spot in the Nats' batting order, Mr. Griffith will have to get himself a gun and chase the runs home himself. There isn't anybody except Lewis who can bat fourth.

The Nats would also like to know where three or four necessary pitchers are coming from. Certainly not from the inept, wet-eared crew of bushers who reported at Orlando this year. After Leonard, Hudson and Chase are done with their pitching chores for the Nats, the Washington pitching is not much account at all. And there's a first base problem to be settled, and the club could use some power it doesn't happen to own. We don't think the Nats will win the pennant.

As for the A's well, the guy who said the A's have it was a fabricator.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

Clearwater, Fla., March 23.—Like water finding its natural level, the Brooklyn Dodgers have wound up in a sanatorium. Traveling from the sublime to the meticulous, they have been shipped up from the dreamy luxury of the Hotel Nacional in Havana to Safety Harbor, Fla., where they are now being held partly in the Safety Harbor Sanatorium across the street.

CONSIDINE

All of this gave us a nasty little turn the other night. Through a cold, disconsolate rain we tooled out of Clearwater—the Dodgers' postoffice address—in search of the new Dodger training camp. We had instructions enough to enable us to refind Dr. Livingston, but went wildly astray in the Mango wildernesses en route. We stopped at an oil-light gas station and fly-blown grocery store, which stood its dreary sentinel duty far out in the middle of the morass and inquired the way from there. A slattern lady with a nerve jangling twang came out in the rain and pointed this way and that into the stygian night and concluded by saying, "take her slow, sport, or you'll miss the whole blank blank town."

It was good advice. By keeping our sedan chair in low gear we didn't overshoot the mark, and soon were being inspected by a sepulchral gent behind the hotel desk. No . . . no rooms. "We'll put you in the annex, where we put the overflow," he intoned hollowly. And soon we were sloshing over to the annex. There wasn't a ball player in sight, and somehow we couldn't believe that the Dodgers really were here.

But the bell hop, who deposited our bags at the entrance of the "annex" and fled, assured us that this was the place.

The "annex" was spookily silent, standing there in the rain with its yellow stucco getting soggy, and it had a disturbingly definite whiff of antiseptic about it. We walked a little timidly to a desk and a young lady, with pince-nez, tinkled a bell. Out popped a middle-aged man, friendly enough, who was introduced to us as "doctor." He summoned someone else, down the hall and up came a man. We looked twice to be sure. He was dressed like an extra in the Dr. Kildare pictures, and at first we thought he was dressed for an early morning tennis date. He led us to an elevator. It was a slow elevator and the silence therein was heavy. So, to make a little talk and with that rare wit that has made us the toast of 17 continents, we said gayly, "What is this, a sanatorium?" Then we led the laughter . . . until it became too apparent that we were the only one laughing.

"Certainly," the male nurse said, civilly.

It was useless to scream. We were trapped. We had believed for years that there was something balmy about the Dodgers, and the things they do, but here was the awful truth. The whole team had been committed. There was no use to plead sanity. We had a momentary vision of the Dodger outfield, all 18 of them, kicking around on the floors above, trying to break the bonds of their strait-jackets.

The room was cheerful enough with its bottled water and unclouded reading lights. A maid knocked on the door after awhile and asked us if we wanted the beds turned down. We said no. So she came in and turned them down . . . Humming. We tried the windows after that. It was about a 30-foot drop, but instead we dropped off to sleep and dreamt that Larry MacPhail had fired Leo Durocher for pretending to be Napoleon when everybody, of course, knows that MacPhail is.

It was a raw, rainy day when we awoke and the landscape out the window apparently had been designed by Salvador Dali. We crept downstairs past what looked like operating rooms, and trotted back to the little street. Sure enough, there were the Dodgers as if nothing had happened to them. They apparently don't even know they have been committed. Poor wretches. They were sitting around, reading sporting news, playing the slot machines, spitting in the rubber plant pots, talking to their wives, kidding the waitresses and playing blackjack and the juke box.

Their keepers have concocted some mad story about this place. Seems they've coaxed the Dodgers to believe that the sanatorium really is one of the finest places of its kind in America . . . That it was built over four great Sulphur Springs which were discovered by De Soto in the 1500s and named the Spiritu Santo Springs by him. They believe that this place is internationally known for its electrotherapy, massaging, sun bathing, corrective nutrition classes and manipulations.

Grid Dodgers Offer A. U. Star Contract

JABLONSKY

American University is on the threshold of sending its first representative to the National Professional Football League. It was revealed yesterday that John Jablonsky, captain and tackle of the Eagles' 1940 eleven, has been offered a contract to play with the Brooklyn Dodgers next season.

Jablonsky, who stands 6 feet 1 and weighs 210 pounds, is reported to be weighing an offer calling for $125 per game for the 11-game schedule. The 22-year-old native of Hicksville, Long Island, N. Y., is expected to sign as soon as he can arrange to take a law course at some New York school.

Political Science Major

Jablonsky, who expects to be graduated from A. U. in June, is majoring in political science. After graduation he had planned to take up law at Georgetown.

Though Americna University was no power in football circles, Jablonsky won quite a bit of recognition during the four years he blocked and tackled for the Eagles. A. U. uses freshmen players. Last season he was named on the all-opponent team of Susquehanna, an undefeated smalll college team coached by Alonzo A. Stagg, jr. Young Stagg told A. U. Coach Staff Cassell that Jablonsky was on of the best linemen his team faced during the 1940 campaign.

Vic Ghezzi Is Second; Hogan Slips

Bulla and Guldahl Tie for Third Place; Winner Posts 70-70 For Last 36 Holes

By Bill Boni.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Greensboro, N. C., March 23.—Before the most tremendous galleries since Bobby Jones was Garbo's box-office rival, P. G. A. Champion Byron Nelson won the $3,000 greater Greensboro Open Golf tournament today for his first triumph of the 1941 winter tour.

Under the pressure of huge crowds and the knowledge there were capable rivals playing in frent and in back of him, the 28-year-old Toledo, Ohio, pro shot two one-under-par 70's over the Starmount Forest C. C. course to finish the 72-holes with a score of 276. That was good for a $1,200 check and a two-stroke margin over Vic Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J.

Two 70's doesn't sound like much, compared to the scores some of the topnotch pros turn in these days. But nobody was fooling with Starmount today (there were only three rounds better than 70) and under the conditions Nelson's golf was just what the doctor ordered.

Finishes Like Champion

He finished just like the War Admiral for whom he often has been nicknamed. Going to the sixteenth tee on his final round, the tall, wiry Texan was two over par and well aware of the fact that he had to put on a killing sprint to assure himself of victory.

Watching him do it, it looked very simple. On the sixteenth he walloped a drive that was only 10 feet behind Lawson Little, a notorious slugger, and laid an iron up 8 feet from the pin. That putt rolled home as if a little man with a string were pulling it into the cup.

On the 182-yard seventeenth, his tee shot landed on the left-hand edge of the green, hole high and 15 feet from the cup. That one, too, went in as if there were no other place for the ball to go.

The eighteenth at Starmount is 453 yards and a par 5. Nelson made it look like child's play with a drive, an iron, two putts and victory.

Draws Big Following

Playing with Little and Rod Munday, Nelson brought some 3,000 people into the eighteenth, where some 5,000 already were waiting, banked

Travis Belts 4-Run Homer As Senators Get 22 Hits

Welaj, Chase Also Star; Newsom Goes Well; Trout and 2 Others Are Slugged

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Lakeland, Fla., March 23.—The Nats were sort of wonderful today. They licked the Tigers, 15 to 5, and slugged out 22 hits, honest. And today you may have your choice of Washington heroes—Cecil Travis, or Ken Chase or Johnny Welaj. You'll probably take Travis, though because:

In the sixth inning, with the bases full, Travis made the dream hit—a line-drive home run into right centerfield that sent four Washington runs across the plate at one clip. The Tigers looked like no pennant winners today. They gave up nine hits and eight runs to the Nats in the big six innings, and before the game was over the Tigers had tossed five errors into the proceedings.

Travis' beauteous blast sort of eclipsed the contributions of Johnny Welaj, who made four of the Nats' hits, and Ken Chase, who pitched five innings of two-hit ball before he retired. The Tigers last four runs were scored off Danny MacFayden, who encountered one bad inning—the sixth. By their combined efforts, however, Chase and MacFayden limited Detroit to five hits.

Newsom In Form

No blame for the Nats' scoring attached to big Buck Newsom, who was making his first start of the Grapefruit League season. Newsom displayed himself for three innings and allowed only one hit—a double by Travis. It was against three Tiger rookies—Dizzy Trout, Clay Smith and Earl Cook that the Nats went downward. Within a few days, Smith and Cook will probably be shuffling off to Buffalo whence they came.

Only George Case and Jack Sanford failed to share in the Nats' slugging. Roger Cramer snapped out of his slump with three straight hits, the last a screaming triple to center. Travis contributed two other blows in addition to his single. Buddy Lewis, like Welaj, also made four hits. Al Evans had two for two.

Chase pitched two hitless innings and then gave up a 1-0 lead to the Tigers, after getting the first two men out in the third. Newsom beat out a hit to Lewis and went to

Hockey Eagles Turn Back Rovers, 4 to 3

By the Associated Press

New York, March 23.—The Washington Eagles, newly crowned champions of the Eastern Hockey League, edged out a 4-to-3 victory over the New York Rovers today in the second game of a double-header at Madison Square Garden in the United States Amateur Hockey Association Tournament.

The Atlantic City Sea Gulls won the opener, defeating River Vale's Skeeters, 7 to 6.

Norm Burns, who established a new goal-scoring record during the regular season, tallied twice for the Eagles, with Frank Mailley and Gordon Pranschke taking one apiece. The latter's goal at 3:33 of the final period decided the issue.

Julie Sawchuk, Bill Tilson and Elmer Kreller provided the Rovers' tallies.

Atlantic City Defeats River Vale Skeeters, 7-6

By the Associated Press

New York, March 23.—Dinty Scott's goal, less than two minutes before the end of the third period, climaxed a comeback by the Atlantic City Sea Gulls and gave them a 7-6 victory over the River Vale Skeeters today at Madison Square Garden.

The contest marked the opening of the Amateur Hockey Association of the United States Round Robin Tournament among six Eastern Amateur League clubs.

Trailing 6-3 at the start of the final session, the Gulls stormed back to knot the count with three goals in as many minutes. Jim Russell notched two of them and Blink Bellinger got the other.

After Russell's second tally had tied the score, Percy Nichols, of River Vale, drove the puck past Lile Porter, but the goal was disallowed. The referee ruled that a River Vale man was in the cresse when the shot was made.

Whitney's First Night Wins Jolea Show Title

Cherry Bounce, Also From Llangollen Stables, Takes Hunter Crown Before 1,000 Spectators

By Anne Hagner

Travilah, Md., March 23.—Conclusively proving his ability in the Open jumping ranks, Mrs. Altemus Whitney's former conformation hunter, First Night, today amassed 16 points in the Jolea Farms Horse Show to take the jumper crown at the farm of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Cotter.

A crowd estimated at 1,000 paid admissions, which go for British war relief, saw the handsome chestnut triumph over Eddie Talbert's Good Friday while another Whitney-owned mount, Cherry Bounce, carried away the hunter crown to make it a 100 per cent Llangollen Stables day. The show drew more than 200 entries.

First Night, which has appeared in open jumping classes in only a few previous shows, achieved most of his fame several seasons ago when he was winning conformation classes and acting as his owner's mount in the hunting field. His tremendous jumping ability was so much in evidence on several occasions when he jumped big fences that stopped the rest of the field with the Orange County and Piedmont hounds that Mrs. Whitney's ace trainer, Norman Haymaker, decided to try the gelding at the open jumping business.

Experiment Works

The wisdom of the move was first shown at the President's Birthday Horse Show at Fort Myer in January, when First Night was no less than spectacular over modified Olympic fences, the like of which he never saw in his Virginia haunts.

Haymaker is now anxious to qualify First Night for the invitation high jumping contest at the Armed Services show next weekend, but the chestnut has never been forced to jump the required 5 feet or more during a show in order to rate an invitation. The committee assured Haymaker, however, that if First Night proved his worth at Jolea Farms, he could join his stable-mate, Bon Nuit, in the Armed Services contest.

With the championship bowl tucked securely under his arm, Haymaker, jogged toward the Llangollen vans with a gleeful smile, confident that Roland Ridgeway, Bon Nuit's rider, will not be un-

Bill Harris, Cameo Outfielder, Sold to Springfield Club

Eastern League Nine Buys D. C. Sandlotter; Led Industrial League

BILL HARRIS

Bill Harris, Cameo Furniture outfielder who hit .500 to lead the Industrial League in batting last season, has been sold to Springfield, Mass., of the Class A Eastern League, it was announced yesterday by Manager "Connie" Wyche.

Harris, who played with Cameo two years after graduating from Hume Fogg High in Nashville and serving as bat boy for the Vols of the Southern Association, will leave Wednesday to join his new club.

The 24-year-old outfielder is considered a long hitter and a good fielder. He compiled a fielding average of .966 last season and slugged out four home runs and a smattering of doubles and triples. Harris plays leftfield normally, but has been shifted with success to the infield, particularly shortstop.

Abe Simon's Right Hand Fractured, Johnston Says

By the Associated Press

New York, March 23.—Jimmy Johnston, manager of Heavyweight Abe Simon, announced tonight that an examination today by the fighter's physician had revealed the fracture of a small bone in Simon's right hand.

The injured hand was immediately placed in a cast.

Johnston disclosed that Simon had complained of a pain in the hand before last Friday's bout with Champion Joe Louis at Detroit, but that neither had regarded the pain as serious and had decided to say nothing about it.

He said further examinations and X-rays would be made, but that at the moment he did not think the injury would keep Simon from going through with his return bout with Louis here May 16.

25,000 Jeer El Magnifico's Latest Failure

By the Associated Press

Mexico City, March 23.—Matador Lorenzo Garza, once toasted up and down Mexico as El Magnifico, lost another fight to the bull today, repeat g his "supreme disgrace" of three weeks ago and walking humbly from the ring while 25,000 fans screamed in anger.

In short—"the magnificent" again failed to kill the bull with nine sword thrusts.

Bull Did a Ferdinand

It was Garza's last fight of the season, which closes next Sunday.

Bull fight experts said they could not remember when a top-ranking matador had had two bulls removed alive from the Arena in one season.

Garza's restraint on quitting the scene of his second "supreme disgrace," plus the fact that the bull was cowardly and refused to fight probably will persuade the authorities to refrain from levying a 5,000 peso fine on him, critics asserted.

Already Fined $1,000

Garza already has been fined 1,000 pesos for permitting a bull to survive nine sword thrusts three weeks ago.

On the next Sunday, he again suffered reverses when a bull tore his pants; and last Sunday he failed to dominate the bulls, though killing two with badly-placed thrusts.

Rangers Beat Red Wings, 3-1; Square Series

By International News Service

New York, March 3.—The New York Rngers remained in the Stanley Cup competition tonight by defeating the Detroit Red Wings, 3 to 1, in a penalty-studded contest before 14,019 fans.

The game started in riotous fashion, but Referee Mickey Ion took a firm hand and sent the offenders off like clockwork. Detroit had six offenses in the opening stanza, against five for the Blueshirts, Babe Pratt netted a 50-foot drive for the lone tally in this period.

At 3:02, the Winngs evened matters when Grosso sneaked one through Kerr's defense. Shibicky put the Rangers in the lead again on a double pass from the Colvilles at 11:30.

In the final minute of the third frame, Mac Colville sunk the disc after a pass from Pratt.

The Rangers resorted to straight hockey in chalking up the win, which ties the series at 1-all. The final game between the Red Wings and Rangers will be played in Detroit Tuesday night.

Indoor Boxing Season Hits Peak Tonight With All-Star Show

Four Leading Lightweights Are Featured

Spiegel vs. White And Hurst vs. Cross May Draw 3,000 Fans To Turner's Arena

By Al Hailey

A capacity crowd of 3,000 is expected to take a jaunt out to Turner's Arena tonight at 8:30 as the indoor boxing season there hits its peak. Here's why:

Harry Hurst, of Montreal, Canada, versus Tommy Cross, of Philadelphia. Ten rounds.

Tommy Spiegel, of Uniontown, Pa., versus Slugger White, of Fall River, Mass. Ten rounds.

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez expects this array of lightweight talent to furnish the fastest action so far this season in the Fourteenth and W Streets fight emporium. What's more, Menendez is seeking to bring Lightweight Champion Lew Jenkins to Washington in May to defend his title against the most impressive winner tonight.

Blood Bank to Benefit

Ten per cent of the gross proceeds from the show will be turned over to the Children's Hospital Blood Bank Fund, sponsored by The Washington Post and Radio Station WJSV.

Former Heavyweight Champion Jimmy Braddock, who has volunteered his services as a boxing instructor, will be at the ringside as the guest of Representative Fred Hartley, of New Jersey.

Hurst, who claims the Canadian lightweight championship, needs no introduction to the District. He scored knockouts in each of his three appearances here and will be an 8-5 favorite over Cross tonight.

Make Debuts

Spiegel and White are making their ring debuts in the Capital, but the records of both are well known.

Spiegal, whose manager said he has lost but seven fights in 76 starts, claims the Pennsylvania lightweight championship and has beaten such lads as Bob Montgomery, Sammy Angott, current N. B. A. champion, and Dave Castilloux. White has won 19 straight.

Although Tommy fights with a game leg as a result of an attack of infantile paralysis, he'll be a 7-to-5 favorite over the hard-punching Whit tonight.

In the preliminar Menendez is introducing a flock of untrained talent of the type which always puts on a crowd-pleasing slugfest. Two four-rounders bring out Taylor Miller against Tony Kelley, lightheavyweights; Tommy Hart versus the six-round semifinal offers Roy Frankie Martini, lightweights; and Dunn versus Floyd Grayson, middleweights.

Middleweight King Wishes Spiegel Good Luck

NBA Boxing Rankings Announced

By the Associated Press

Milwaukee, March 23.—The National Boxing Association, in its quarterly ratings announced today, listed Anton Christofordis, of Greece, as the light-heavyweight champion and moved Billy Conn, the former king of 175-pounders, into the heavyweight division as one of the three outstanding boxers fit to meet Joe Louis.

The association reported that there were no "logical contenders" for Louis' crown. The boxing board groups the best fighters in every weight division as logical contenders, outstanding boxers, and worthy of honorable mention. Champions are ordered to fight at least one outstanding boxer six months after winning a title, and one logical contender at least oonce a year.

Only Three Heavys Listed

Max Baer, Conn and Lou Nova were the only three fighters listed in the heavyweight "outstanding" class. Abe Simon, the New Yorker who stayed 13 rounds with Louis at Detroit Friday is given honorable mention along with 11 others.

For the first time in several years the N. B. A., ratings fail to list the names of two former champions, Henry Armstrong and Lou Ambers. Both have retired.

Fred J. Saddy, chairman of the N. B. A. championship committee, declared the National Boxing Association was willing to do anything within its power to settle disputes over recognition of champions. Some of the fighters recognized as champions by the N. B. A. are not recognized in New York and other States which are not members of the association.

Aims to Unscramble Muddle

"The N. B. A. is very much interested in having but one recognized champion in each division," Saddy said, "and would like to see other claimants settle their dispute in or outside of N. B. A. territory. Our sole aim is for the betterment of boxing."

Alvis Renews Attempts to Get Louis for Baer

Irked no end by the hue and cry over the "great 13-round stand" made by Abe Simon against Joe Louis Friday night, Promoter Ray Alvis last night recalled that Buddy Baer flattened gigantic Abe in three rounds and said he would redouble efforts to arrange a Louis-Baer fight here.

"What's this guy Simon ever done anyway," demanded Alvis, echoing the sentiments of Baer's manager, Ancil Hoffman.

"Buddy knocked him kicking in three rounds and thought nothing of it," Hoffman told Alvis by telephone yesterday. "Maybe that will open the eyes of some of the boys who have tried to discredit my claim that Buddy Baer is the next world's heavyweight champion."

Buddy, whose last fight ended in defeat at the hands of Eddie Blount, fights Two Ton Tony Galento at Uline's Ice Arena April 8 in a 10-round battle that already is seen as a $25,000 sellout. The winner was tentatively scheduled to fight Louis at Griffith Stadium in May, but Mike Jacobs' plans to rematch Simon with Louis in Madison Square Garden has knocked that bout in the head.

D. C. Golfer Air-Mails Score to California

Rock Creek Linksman, Oakland Pal, Trade Scores From Coast-to-Coast; Golf Notes

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Every play air-mail golf? It's the latest.

We've heard of rifle and swimming matches by telegraph but but a coast-to-coast golf match between John MacConnell, a local War Department employe and Al Reigner, of the Public Health Service in Oakland, Calif., was reported yesterday by Rock Creek Manager Tommy Doerer, jr.

Doerer was settling up after the biggest day of the season when MacConnell rushed in and said "Sign this card please, Mr. Doerer, I've got to send it air-mail tonight to California." Doerer scanned the card, a low-90 score, no holes-in-one to make it conspicious, so he asked why this score was worth a six-cent stamp.

MacConnell then explained the series of matches with an old friend who plays over the Lincoln Park course in Oakland.

The stake, when they get together this year, will be a complete night's entertainment, on the loser. Dinner, a show, night club and all the trimmings.

Reigner plays over the 5,390-yard California layout, with a par of 69, while MacConnell uses Rock Creek for his home, 5,300 yards, with a par of 68. They exchange the signed cards for comparative scores and then at the end of the season figure up.

Sounds like a good idea if the courses are fairly well matched. I'd hate to be playing Pebble Beach, though, with my opponent at West Potomac.

KENWOOD

J. J. Byrne and R. Chamberlain tied for low net as George Diffenbaugh reported a blind bogey at Kenwood yesterday, the only club to sponsor a tournament, although all reported the usual heavy spring Sunday play.

Byrne scored 96-24, 72, and Chamberlain 90-18, 72. Three tied for the runner-up spot, P. S. Alverson, 96-18, 78; R. G. Peebles, 82-4, 78, and S. E. Carpenter, 89-11, 78.

C. A. Miller half missed his drive off the par four seventh tee at Kenwood, but he made up for it and then some by knocking a four-wood shot in the cup for an eagle deuce.

GOLF NOTES—Wiffy Cox, playing 18 holes for the third time in six weeks, gave par a trimming at Congressional with a 70, two under regulation figures. Cox and George Richardson proved too good for Dr. H. L. Smith and Bill Wenzel . . . Sammy Snead has a golf clinic listed for Detroit April 10, but an effort is being made to move it back so he can play in the British War Relief matches here at Chevy Chase on that date . . . Wilbur Taylor has called a meeting of the Argyle golf committee Tuesday night at the clubhouse. Indian Spring members may lose part of the sixth and seventh holes, old 15 and 16, to the Maryland State Roads Commission. If the proposed road goes through, the sixth tee may be moved back near the old first green and the hole played as a dog leg par four. The seventh would remain as a par five but shorter than its present length . . . Members of Rock Creek's Early Bird Club will meet Thursday at 7 p. m. at the uptown public links club to discus plans for the season, including a tournament for the S. G. Leoffler Trophy . . . Plans for an Invitation Tournament at Anacostia, open to public links and private club members, and other municipal golf matters will be discussed in a meeting at Anacostia tonight at 8 o'clock.

Desautels went to second as Johnny Rucker threw to the plate, trying to head off Mack. Desautels then stole third and came in on Feller's bunt. Bucky Walters, who had given only one run and six hits in nine previous exhibition innings, was wild and gave Brooklyn seven of ten safeties, including a long triple by Paul Waner.

Lonnie Frey dropped two throws to pave the way for Dodger rallies in the fifth and sixth. Bill Werber was the only Redleg to sparkle, banging a line double over second, getting a single, and tossing out three Dodgers on fine throws from third.

Ed Nash Wins Old Dominion Pin Stakes

A first day's score of 709 by Ed Nash stood up for first prize in the annual Old Dominion Sweepstakes that drew an all-time national record sweepstakes field of 272 bowlers to the nearby Virginia alleys Saturday and Sunday.

The entry list was 21 more than the former mark, 251 in the Margaret Lynn Sweepstakes last year. The record field of men and women competed for 65 cash and merchandise prizes.

Worth $150

Nash's scratch total was worth $150 and was six sticks better than a fellow Rosslyn Independent League bowler, George Dice, who posted 658-45, 703, and won $85.

John Nicro, of Chevy Chase, was the only contestant with a gross total over the 700 mark, rolling 669 from scratch and 33 handicap for 702, worth $60.

Reds Megaw, Queen Pin manager, slipped into fourth place and $45 with 667 pins and a 30 handicap for 697, while Robert Willis, Silver Spring, was next with 649-42, 691.

Other Money Winners

Hokie Smith's scratch total of 684 was good for sixth prize of $25, while Bill Krauss was next, 674-9, 683. William Martin followed with 628-54, 682.

Corinne Carskaden was third in the women's class with 561-84, 645, followed by Irene Gochenour, 557-84, 641. Dorothy Workman and Corrine Hauser were well up with respective totals of 567-72, 638 and 572-63, 635.

Manager Galt Davis announced the official prize list will not be announced until all scores and handicaps have been checked.

Maryland's Top Trainers To Compete

Abel, Bedwell and Wheatley Stable to Race Their Horses; Lewis Ships North

Eight and possibly ten of the leading money winning owners during Maryland's 1940 season will be striving for purses when the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association ushers in the 1941 Eastern season April 1 at Bowie.

General Manager Joseph A. Farrell today announced that Mrs. A. J. Abel, third on Maryland's list last year with $42,260; the Wheatley Stable, fourth with $38,190 and Harry Guy Bedwell, sixth last year with $23,365, will all be striving for purses next month.

Others granted stalls for the approaching 11 days, racing and the positions in which they finished on Maryland's 1940 money winning list are: J. Yancy Christmas eighth, Mrs. Ella K. Bryson tenth, J. W. Y. Martin eleventh, A. C. C. Stable twelfth and Mrs. Dion K. Kerr thirteenth.

It is possible that William L. Brann, who was second on Maryland's list last year, and George D. Widener, who finished ninth, will both send a few horses here for what should be the most successful spring meeting in the track's history.

Bedwell on Top

All four of Maryland's leading winning trainers for 1940, are slated to saddle horses next month. They are: H. G. Bedwell, who finished first with 38 winners; P. F. Dwyer, who was second with 18 winners belonging to the Millsdale Stable and Mrs. Tony Pelleteri; A. J. Abel and J. Y. Christmas, who finished in a deadlock for third position, due to their having saddled 15 winners each during Maryland's past season of racing.

Trainer E. E. Russell is due in from Florida with the well balanced string of Weston W. Adams, well known New England sportsman. Some of those slated to carry Adams' silks are: Bow Low, Top Queen, Lovely Dawn, Sun Antioch, Rich Cargo, General Planet, Battle Won, Pay Rack, Mixwell and Princess Donna.

Bow Low is the star of the Adams string. This filly won two consecutive 1⅛-mile races at Hialeah Park last winter. In her first score, Bow Low raced the distance in 1:50 to defeat Silent Witness, Titilator, Mucho Gusto, Interlace, Snow, Sandy Boot and Rex Fag. She came right back and led from flag fall to wire to again be timed in 1:50. Back of her in this effort were Bar Fly, Sirasia, Devil's Craig, Counterpoise, Boss Hoss, Dream Boat, Galway, Titilator, Alhalon and her stablemate, Lovely Dawn.

Benning Horses Ready

The majority of the 150 horses, which wintered at the historic Benning track on the outskirts of Washington, will be vanned here prior to the April 1 opening. Due to the sandy condition of the Benning track, horsemen were able to work their charges almost daily since early in January; therefore turfites can look for the Benning contingent to be well advanced.

Tom Lewis, who handles a public stable, including the string of Gault Davis of Washington, is shipping in Flying Deekee, Yankee Lad, He's Hope, Purport, Lackawanna, Duchess Del and Goodwine from Florida. Lewis will remain in Maryland for the spring meetings and then trek to Charles Town, W. Va., for the long summer session at that point.

General Manager Joe Farrell says that the advance sale of private boxes is the largest in recent years.

Schoen Has Promising Group Of 2-Year-Olds at Bowie Oval

Juveniles, Bred by Late Admiral Grayson, Were Given 'Big' Names by Young Sportsman

Marylanders and Pennsylvanians will watch with more than ordinary interest the development of three 2-year-olds owned by August H. Schoen, the young sportsman from Brookline, Pa., which is in Delaware County, a hop, step and jump from Philadelphia. He also has a pair of 3-year-olds in his manage, Clamor Girl, by Neddie—Flossine, and Matab, by Traumer—Sunmagne.

This stable now is quartered at Bowie, where the Eastern racing season will open on April 1.

Schoen's philosophy in naming horses—or any animal for that matter—is give them a good name and invariably you have a winner. Schoen gave considerable thought selecting names for his juveniles before submitting them to the registrar of the New York Jockey Club. He hopes that his theory will prove correct by time the last bugle blows next fall at Bowie, provided his colorbearers stand the long grind and do not meet with so many mishaps that can befall a thoroughbred.

Bred by Grayson

Schoen purchased his baby racers from the Salubria Stable last fall. They are by well-known sires and were bred by the late Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson. Training them is Fred Mundy, an assistant to the late Matt Smart and formerly connected with the Salubria establishment. Here they are:

High Celerity, by High Quest and Blond Belle.

Lady Melody, filly, by Strolling Player and Charming Note.

Right now, High Celerity looks the best of the trio. He was fast last fall and is developing splendidly. He was entered in the Pimlico Stakes and also will be nominated for those to be run at Delaware Park. High Quest won the Preakness Stakes. Celerity means quickness of motion, speed and swiftness. All generals want their men to step lively and so The General is aptly named. Lady Melody certainly is a splendid name, considering the names of her father and mothers.

Well-Named Horses

Going back to names, Schoen points out that well-named horses usually mean something. He mentioned Man o' War and many of his descendants, such as Crusader, Mars, American Flag, War Admiral, Edith Cavell, his grandson Hard Tack (sire of Seabiscuit), and among others Sun Beau, Equipose, Gallant Fox, Challenger II (addy of Challedon), Mate, Top Flight, Twenty Grand, Display sire of Discovery, Exterminator, Bimelech, Top Row, Pompey, Fair Play (the daddy of Man o' War), Wise Counsellor, Cavalcade, Bold Venture, Battleship and Case Ace.

It looks as if, in Shoen's reasoning, that there is something in a name after all.

Dear Al: It is debatable whether the failure of Bimelech to win the 1940 Kentucky Derby was as costly to Kentuckians as the collapse of Tannery in the Derby of 1930. Tannery, as a 2-year-old in 1929, displayed a high order of speed and compiled quite a record, but it was not exactly on the spectacular side and the winter books opened with 60 to 1 against him on March 7, 1930, with 100 to 1 to be found here and there by bargain hunters. Proceeding to the races as a 3-year-old in early spring of 1930, Tannery won his first start, merely cantering to his rather formidable opposition at Lexington. Kentuckians sat up, took out their bankrolls and proceeded to "shop" for Tannery, driving the odds down and down—50, 40, 30, 20. Tannery was making the headlines, and he hit them with big boldface type when he whipped a speedy field, including E. R. Bradley's Derby hopes—Breezing Thru and Buckeye Poet—with consummate ease in the Derby Trial. The stampede to Tannery grew greater. In Kentucky there's always belief that anything which can take the springtime measure of high class Bradley horses is a sensational performer. So Kentucky bet on Tannery—down, down went the odds and on May 13, when the last winter books odds were sent out, Tannery was 5 to 1, and this was cut to 4 two days before the Derby. The East meanwhile had an idea that Gallant Fox might do all right in the Derby and supported him. The Fox opened at 10 to 1 in the books, closing at 7 to 5 during Derby week. The support which Kentucky gave Tannery in the winter books did not weaken on Derby Day. While Gallant Fox was installed favorite in the machines, $1.19 to $1, Tannery was second choice in na 15-horse field at $3.12 to $1. At the break, High Foot stepped to the front, with Tannery right after him. At the half-mile, Alcibiades ran into the lead. Buckeye Poet was second, a neck in front of Tannery. At the mile post, Gallant Fox had raced into leadership, Crack Brigade was second, Gallant Knight third, Alcibiades fourth. Tannery fifth—and that's where Willie Garner, astride Tannery, asked his horse to give all he had. But Tannery already had given his best. Instead of moving on, he dropped back, finishing eighth, with about 14 lengths separating him from the winning Gallant Fox. Kentuckians licked their financial wounds and allowed that maybe they had been wrong in thinking that Tannery could go far, as well as fast. Tannery demonstrated in later racing that he was a mighty good horse, even if not of Derby caliber. He continued to win races through to 1935, when he was 8 and had been dropped into the lowly claiming division. Late in 1935 he was injured while training for a race and was destroyed, gone to the Thoroughbreds' Valhalla, but never to be forgotten by Kentuckians of the 1930 vintage. Art Brown hung it on me in that bowling match by some 30 pins, but I have challenged him to another battle. I was short and need that one as a conditioner. I'm slightly bowed in the right leg, but I'm on my feed. Wish I were as lucky as that Brown. Won't be long now. BILL.

First race—TRUE HEART has been right on the verge of winning in several races. This might be the right day for the filly to graduate from the maiden ranks. I'm going to string along. DATED UP gets the rail position and has speed. RIVERLASS closed ground last out.

Second race — ETHEL BLUME probably is the right one in this cheap field. The weight and the route are what she likes and Robart will do the saddle job. PUNTA FINAL, with meade, will be right in there knocking and is dangerous. GOLD SAXON deserves some attention in this maiden event.

Third race — ANNIE ALONE should go well in a field of this kind. She will be particularly prominent if the track remains off. ARCHED gets a good figure and may cause the top one trouble. ALL TME HIGH for the show award.

Fourth race—REACT will awaken with a bang in this field, I believe. Conditions are right and all we need is a good ride. DARB DESMOND belongs in this company. PONDEXTER is better than generally rated and may surprise.

Fifth race—The Gration entry of DOUBT NOT and SPEED TO SPARE seems to hold a strong hand in this short sprint. They have the weight piled on, but the distance is right up their alley. MARLE is consistent and dangerous here. Light weight should put ONE WITCH in close.

Sixth race—MERRY GESTURE seems to have found the right spot in this group of sprinters. McCreary will do the riding and I see no reason for mistakes. LITTLE BOLO and DARBY DEAN for the place and show money.

Seventh race—FELSUN failed last out, but seldom runs bad races. Should do a lot of running in this group. EARLY SETTLER has returned to top form and will be right there. MISS B. B. for the show end.

Eighth race—MARCHING FEET gets a high figure at this route. I'm going to string along. PATSY BEGONE'S early speed may allow her to open a lead and she should stick it out. COPIN to take care of the others.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take DISSEMBLER, TRANSDAY and CALLING.

Best bet—MERRY GESTURE.

Lakeland, Fla., March 23.—The suspicion is that the Washington Club was showing off Buddy Myer to the Tigers today when Bucky Harris started the veteran at second base . . . Detroit would pay a fancy price for Myer if other clubs would waive on him . . . Myer showed to advantage . . . he walked and hit a fierce single in two times at bat, and then Harris benched him, probably to preserve his record . . . Jake Early was hit in the leg by one of his own foul tips and had to retire in the fourth inning . . . Johnny Welaj is making something of a sensational bid for a Washington outfield . . . in his last two games he has made eight hits . . . Tomorrow, the Nats will meet up with an old pal . . . they will travel to Leesburg, Fla., to meet the St. Paul team which is managed by Red Kress . . . Within the space of four seconds today, Buddy Lewis looked like the greatest and the worst third baseman in history . . . he made an incredible one-handed, back-handed pick-up of Newsom's vicious drive down the third base line and then threw the ball 20 feet over the head of First Baseman Jack Sanford . . . the Tigers have promoted Barney McCosky from second to third place in their batting order, in the hope of capitalizing to a greater extent on his hitting . . . last year the center fielder batted .340 . . . Little Dick Bartell is apparently a dead duck in the Tigers' camp . . . Manager Del Baker is resolved to turn the shortstop job over to Eric McNair, who came via waivers from the White Sox . . . Brewers Rout Baltimore At Riverside

Chris Heurich's Washington Brewers put on a fast 15-minute finish in their final home American League game last night to rout the Baltimore Clippers, 48 to 27, before several hundred spectators in Riverside Stadium.

The Brewers still have two road games, with New York and Brooklyn, and at least one more local game in the intra-city series with the Bruins, but last night's tilt concluded their league home card and left them in fourth place.

The Brewers led, 12-10, at the end of the first period but dropped three points back, 17-14, midway in the second stanza. They knotted the count at 21-all and when Phil Rabin swished one from mid-court they were ahead to stay. The score at the end of the second period was 26-21.

Brewers at Best

The Brewers were at their best in the final period and with Ben Goldfadden, Nat Frankel and George Dioth passing and shooting the visitors dizzy, piled up 22 points to Baltimore's six.

Frankel and Moe Dubilier each dropped in 10 points to lead the well-divided Brewer attack.

United Typewriter defeated Adam Hats in a nonleague preliminary, 39-34, paced by Ollie Tipton's 11 points.

Margaret Richards, of William and Mary College, was the outstanding individual in a triangular swimming meet at the Ambassador Hotel pool Saturday night. Shown here winning the 50-yard freestyle, Miss Richards also anchored her 160-yard medley relay team to victory, and placed second in the 40-yard backstroke. Temple, scoring 43 points, won the meet. Shephard Holt Scores Upset In Badminton

Shephard Holt, youthful Kenyon College tennis star home on spring vacation, scored a notable upset in the annual District badminton championships yesterday at the Kensington Armory when he eliminated second-ranking Herb Bryant in the second round.

Winning by the decisive scores of 15-5 and 15-4, the 21-year-old unseeded entry heralded his first start in the tournament since gaining the finals in 1936. Holt was runner-up to Waldron Faulkner in the 1936 tournament, and will face that same player tomorrow, if both survive their quarter-finals tests tonight.

Only one other surprise was recorded yesterday as men's and women's singles and doubles and mixed doubles progressed at least partly into the second round. That was the doubles defeat of Scott Pollock and Bill Reinay by Ken Sparrow and John Wilkinson. The scores were 15-3 and 15-12.

U. S. Steel Has Billion-Dollar Arms Orders

By the Associated Press

New York, March 23.—The giant $1,855,000,000 United States Steel Corporation is resuming its 1917-18 arms speed, and is turning out both peacetime and defense materials at close to capacity rates, its annual report to stockholders indicated today.

The corporation, according to Government sources, is working on defense contracts aggregating around $465,000,000. In addition, it is supplying steels to other concerns working on intermingled peacetime and arms contracts. Financial observers estimate that "Big Steel's" backlog of both direct and indirect unfilled armament business may be in the vicinity of $1,000,000,000 or upwards.

Irving S. Olds, chairman of the board of directors, outlining the company's part in the "all out" defense effort, reported these up-to-the-minute developments:

"1. United States Steel is building destroyers and cruisers.

"2. It is developing additional armor plate facilities to meet the requirements of the naval and military expansion program.

"3. It is producing shell forgings, unloaded shells and bombs of various sizes.

"4. It is sending large quantities of steel to Great Britain and Canada.

"5. It is supplying a steady flow of steel to manufacturers in different parts of the country who have taken contracts with the Army or the Navy under the defense program.

"6. Its ocean-going steamers are bringing strategic materials from distant foreign ports to meet defense needs."

At 99% of Capacity

The company's mills, working the clock around, currently are turning out steels at a rate of approximating 99 per cent of theoretical capacity. Employes in the final 1940 quarter averaged 272,087, against an average of 254,393 for the full year. The average pay per worker in 1940 was $1,724.

The corporation's exports of all types of steel products in 1940 constituted about 20 per cent of the total steel tonnage sold. Olds said About one-half of the exports went to Great Britain, about one-quarter to Canada and Latin America, and the remainder to other foreign destinations.

"Out of broad experience the corporation has learned that periods of war being only transitory profits and result in long continued, serious disturbances and enduring increases in cost," Olds remarked. "But today," he added, "in its endeavor to cooperate fully with the Government in the natjonal defense program, the corporation is proud to be able to say that every call made upon its facilities has been met speedily and completely."

Final figures, little changed from earlier preliminary estimates, showed United States Steel in 1940 had net income of $102,211,282 after taxes and charges, equal after preferred dividends to $8.85 a common share, compared with $41,119,934 or $1.83 a common share in 1939.

Commenting on earnings, the "Big Steel" chairman said: "If the Nation's productive mechanism is to continue effectively to function, the earnings of any basic industry over the years should be sufficient to pay a reasonable amount to the owners, to attract additional capital when required, and to permit retaining enough money to provide for technological progress and for future emergencies."

In regard to research, Olds said much of the activity has dealt with armor plate, tank armor, shell steel, bomb forgings, performance of metals at high temperatures, new uses of steel for mobile equipment, etc.

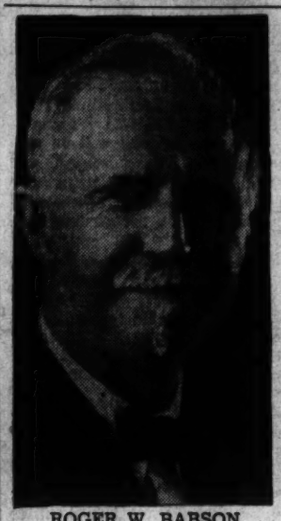
The corporation entered 1941 with around $134,000,000 of unfinished plant expansion under way.

The Stock Trend

By Roger W. Babson

U. S. vs. Foreign Securities

In spite of the highest rate of industrial production this country has ever known, the stock market shows but little signs of life. Furthermore, while prices have been falling on the New York Stock Exchange since last November, stocks in London have gone up and in Berlin have held at a very high level. Will United States and Canadian stocks remain at their prevailing low prices, slide off further, or is there a rise ahead? These are questions in which readers are interested. Let us look at the record.



ROGER W. BABSON

Following the start of World War II in September, 1939, German stock prices reacted only a trifle the next month and ever since then have been climbing to new highs. Of course, the Berlin market is controlled. It is not the type of free market which exists in New York, Toronto, or even in London, despite the pegging of the British pound. From the commencement of hostilities, British stocks also moved steadily upward until March, 1940, when they took a nose-dive, reaching their low in the early summer of 1940. Since then, London prices have risen more than New York prices.

At the beginning of the war the indices of New York and Berlin stock prices were the same, namely, 93. New York prices rose above those of Berlin for a month, then reacted and continued for six months a sidewise movement. In April, 1940, a month after the decline started in London, American stock prices fell sharply, showing a drop from a high of 95½ in October, 1939, to a low of 73½ in June, 1940. In the same period of time, London prices dropped from 72 to 64¾, thus showing nowhere near the collapse experienced in the American market. New York prices rose from a low of 73½ in June, 1940, to a high of 82 in November, 1940. London prices started up a month later. However, in November, New York prices again declined until now they stand at 76, compared with 93 when the war started.

While New York prices have been declining, London prices have held up much better. Since the war started, there has been a net loss in London prices of less than 5 per cent, whereas the net loss in the New York prices has been more than 15 per cent. Over the same period, the rise in Berlin prices has shown an extraordinary gain of over 35 per cent. This rise in German securities, while admittedly in a controlled market, should encourage American investors. Certainly if controls are put into effect here to eliminate the dangers of inflation, higher taxes, or even more stringent SEC regulations, the Berlin market demonstrates that controls need not necessarily depress the prices of stocks.

Some of my readers are pleading that United States and Canadian stocks are already selling at bankrupt quotations; that much further drop will wipe out remaining equities. These readers are also pleading for a return to the old fairly-free form of margin buying and short selling. They want to buy stocks, but hate to put up the cash; that is they want to speculate. This is a dangerous and vicious practice. I have never bought a share of stock on margin in my life. One of the best things the SEC has accomplished has been the stiffening of margin requirements and the practical elimination of stock market manipulation.

If any equities are in danger of being wiped out they are individual equities and not the equities of corporations. Too many businesses are worrying today about stock prices, failing to study the real values which these stocks represent. For example, General Electric remains as great and efficient an organization and has the same amount of property and equipment whether its shares are selling for 41 or for 26. No form of equity is wiped out of a corporation by a slump in the price of its shares. However, individual equities most certainly can be wiped out when one trades on margin, whether buying or selling short.

I have no way of knowing, but undoubtedly shareholders in Berlin are subject to severe restrictions or profits taxes which prevent them from selling securities today at 128 for which they paid 93 at the beginning of World War II. Hitler presumably is interested in having sympathetic Nazi investors maintain or increase their original equities in stocks. Their profits come in the form of increased dividends and thus, to a large extent, their income keeps pace with mounting prices and rising costs of living. Also the rising market in Berlin must please investors and free their attention for more important matters.

Some day there will be a terrfic decline in German securities. When that time comes German investors will probably be prevented from flinging their stocks on the market to be sold at declining prices just as they are now prevented from taking profits. Dividends may hold up longer than prices in Berlin, New York, Toronto or London.

In the seesaws of inflation the average investor may be better off in the end, however, to ride the market up and to ride the market down without selling. If, without proper guidance, he sells, his money may not be worth much anyway. Also, the cash will burn a hole in his pocket and he will too quickly buy in again as most investors were doing in the decline in our market from 1929 to 1932.

However, as I look today at our New York stock quotations, I cannot help but believe that the investor who now has a little cash, faith and courage, may well make some selected purchases. Some day there will be encouraging news from abroad with respect to the progress of World War II. Good news to the United States and Canada will be bad news to Germany. Berlin stock prices will fall and ours will rise. Wise indeed is today's investor who sees that the inevitable is bound to happen and that those who have patience and courage can greatly profit when it comes.

Contract Bridge

This question concerns the part of today's hand, taken from last year's Olympic contest. You hold the North cards at a four-heart contract. East has just opened the eight of diamonds; how do you play so as to take ten tricks?

Today's Hand

EAST DEALER

	♠ K J 5 ♡ A Q J 10 6 ◇ 7 3 ♣ K 9 5
♠ 10 ♡ 8 4 3 ◇ A K Q 10 ♣ 8 2	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ Q 8 7 6 3 ♡ 2 ♡ 7 ◇ 8 4 ♣ 7 6 4 3
	♠ A 9 4 ♡ K 9 5 2 ◇ J 9 5 ♣ Q J 10

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	Pass	1 ◇	1 ♡
Pass	2 ♡	3 ◇	3 ♡
Pass	4 ♡	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: 8 ◇.

Declarer makes his contract by taking three spade tricks, postponing touching the suit until he has gained a "count" on the West hand. North ruffs the third round of diamonds with a high trump. The adverse trumps are pulled and the club ace is knocked out. Declarer's sole problem is to avoid the loss of a spade trick. By leaving spades alone until three rounds of each other suit have been played declarer gets an exact count of West's hand: six diamonds, three hearts, at least three clubs, therefore one spade or none. The only chance is that West has one spade, and that it is the queen or the ten. North must cash the spade king; and when the ten falls the finesse against East for the queen of spades is marked. Declarer makes four hearts, losing two diamonds and one club.

When the hand was played at a seven-table duplicate this is what happened:

Four pairs reached four hearts; two pairs made it, two pairs went down one.

Two pairs stopped at three hearts, making three.

One pair East-West arrived at five diamonds; down two.

Anaconda Net In 1940 Equals $4.04 a Share

By the Associated Press

New York, March 23.—Anaconda Copper Mining Co. and subsidiaries today reported 1940 net income totaled $35,052,699, compared with $20,236,552 in 1939.

The 1940 earnings equaled $4.04 a share, against $2.33 a share the preceding year.

Cornelius F. Kelley, chairman, and James R. Robbins, president, told stockholders in the annual report the industry in 1940 operated at a new high record, probably 10 per cent above 1939. Domestic production, they said, was at the maximum rate obtainable with copper "at the relatively low price of 12 cents a pound delivered Connecticut Valley."

They revealed that Anaconda's foreign subsidiaries will supply 130,000 tons of Latin American copper bought by the United States Government to augment domestic supplies. The Government thus far has bought a total of 235,000 tons.

Bruins Beat Toppers, 41-34; Singh Stars

Pointing for their Wednesday night game with the Philadelphia Sphas, the Washington Bruins, colored professional five, scored a 41-34 victory over the Philadelphia Toppers last night at Turner's Arena, before a crowd of 800.

Steadied by "Tarzan" Cooper and fired by the agile and alert Sidat-Singh, the Bruins, with "Soupy" Campbell performing brilliantly, presented their best combination of the year. They overcame the Toppers' 8-3 lead and drew away to show a 25-15 count at the half. Campbell and Singh had scored 9 points each.

Opening the second half with a rush, Tom Sealey tapped one through the basket over his shoulder, while Cooper ran amuck and tossed one in from under the basket. looped another from midcourt and stole the ball from Holland's dribble on a third easy basket. Singh followed his example immediately. The Bruins' 20-point lead was 37 to 17.

Toppers Rally

With the winning Bruin combination benched, the Toppers closed the count to within 3 points, with three minutes to go. Then Coach Lacy sent his stalwarts back and the Toppers' scoring ceased, while Singh added 4 points for the Bruins.

"Fats" Holland was high-point man for the Toppers. George Boggs, whose 18 points were responsible for the visitors' 39-to-33 victory over the Bruins last week, was held practically scoreless against the original line-up yesterday.

challenged when thhe hoped for 61 foot fencing commences at the Myer riding hall.

Haymaker also had the mount on Cherry Bounce, the well built little hunter champion, which made him one of the busiest riders on the grounds. Reserve to the young chestnut was Margaret Cotter's Sumouse, which picked up several minor awards in his initial ring appearance for his new owner. The big thoroughbred was formerly owned by Betty Couzens.

Cherry Bounce, by the way, is likewise a newcomer to the ways of show ring performing. In his two previous attempts, at Aldie Va., and the President's Birthday event, he sangged several blues in hack and hunter hack classes, but today's was his first tricolor gleaning.

Scarlet Coat Scores

Although the Whitney forces accounted for most of the blue ribbons, Claude Owens' honest hunter, Scarlet Coat, captured the biggest class of the day by winning the working hunters' event over eight 4-foot fences. Charles Carrico rode the mare, which defeated Mr. and Mrs. Donald Bradley's hunter-jumper prospect, On Trial, for the blue. On Trial, hitherto a decided in-and-outer, has developed amazingly in recent months and shows considerable promise.

Among the junior riders, Elizabeth Marsh and Gold Vein won major honors as they captured the horsemanship and the open jumping. Dr. Al Kaye's colt, Lucky Fellow, was the junior hunters' winner with Happy Christmas doing the riding.

5, 10 and even 15 feet. The next-best score in when he holed out was the 280 posted by Johnny Bulla, of Greensboro, who had 70 and 72 today.

But Ghezzi didn't check in until the last threesome, and the gallery that followed him and last year's winner, Ben Hogan, up the eighteenth, brought the total attendance for the day to better than 12,000 in the estimation of Fred Corcoran P. G. A. tournament manager.

Ghezzi's three-under-par 68 on his closing effort gave him 278 and $750; Bulla and Ralph Guldahl, Greensboro winner in 1939, took down $500 each for their 280's; Hogan, kiting to a final 73 and 74, and Little won $325 each for their 282's.

second on Lewis' overthrow. From that point he scored on Eric McNair's double to left center. Chase held the Tigers hitless thereafter.

Welaj commenced the Nats' attack on Trout with a double to right in the fourth inning, and the Nats packed three other hits into the session—singles by Lewis, Myer and Chase, himself, which fetched them a 3-1 lead. In the fifth they belted out five more hits and upped their margin to 7-1. Cramer, Welaj, Lewis and Travis singled in succession.

It was in the sixth that the Nats knocked the props from under the ball game. Here are the details of the nine hits and eight runs they jammed into that one big inning: Cramer singled to left. Higgins fumbled Welaj's grounder. Lewis' singled to center filled the bases. Travis' home run to center emptied them. Bloodworth singled to center. Sanford struck out. Evans singled to center. Pinch-Hitter Archie singled to left, driving in the fifth run. Case popped up. Cramer got his second hit of the inning, a terrific triple to center, and the seventh and eighth runs scored. Welaj singled to center and Cramer scored. Lewis beat out an infield hit for the ninth of the inning.

MacFayden was off to a shaky start when he took up the pitching in the sixth and he hurled four runs back at the Tigers. The big blow of the inning was Gehringer's double to right. MacFayden was wild, but he held the Tigers hitless in the last three innings.

It was the Nats' third straight victory over the American League champions, but unfortunately the league title does not change hands in March.

Cox, Plummer Meet Thursday on Mat

For the second time in three weeks Joe Cox, the Kansas Krasher, and Lou Plummer, the Baltimore villain, will come to grips in a wrestling match at Turner's Arena. They were rematched yesterday for a special added attraction on the card Thursday night featuring Mildred Burke, the recognized world's feminine champion, and Patsy Miller, the Nevada cowgirl.

Plummer had demanded a return brawl, claiming that in their last meeting he was the victim of a quick count by Referee Casey Berger after 18 minutes. Cox, who won via disqualification from The Green Hornet last week, readily consented to meet the Baltimorean.

Gover Pleased At Help Given Boys Club

Mayor E. Murray Gover of Hyattsville, president of the Prince Georges County Police Boys Club, yesterday expressed satisfaction over the reception accorded the efforts of the club's directors in establishing new units in Laurel and Oxon Hill.

"The turnout in both localities, and the interest shown by the townspeople, were gratifying to the club workers," he said.

The Oxon Hill unit, to be known as Unit 3, enrolled 55 boys at its first meeting last week, and Unit 4, in Laurel, signed up 35 boys at its initial gathering. Both of these figures are expected to increase after the club work gets under way in the new units.

John G. Freudenberger, athletic coach at the Oxon Hill High School, will supervise the athletic work of Unit 3, with Harry Lines, who holds a similar position at the Hilltop School, conducting sports activities in Unit 4.

With the enlarging of Boys' Club membership, the board of governors felt that the athletic program should be placed in hands of paid instructors instead of depending on volunteer work by the members of the county police and board members.

Ray Larrabee and Bill Yarnell, coaches at Bladensburg and Hyattsville High Schools, have been appointed to handle the work at Units 1 and 2 in Maryland Park and Hyattsville.

Sergt. E. H. Mulligan, of the Colmar Manor police, will act as coordinator of the athletic activities in all four units. He has served as athletic director of the club since its formation.

Carpenter Dies After Fight; Roomer Sought

Police last night were seeking a 24-year-old white man in connection with the death of Isaac U. Miller, 57, of 1210 N Street Northwest.

Miller, a carpenter, was found unconscious in his room about 2:30 a. m. Sunday, and later pronounced dead. He was reported to have suffered severe head injuries in an altercation February 16 with a roomer.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald performed an autopsy, but withheld a certificate.

Only Utter Defeat Can Unseat Hitler, SaysThomas Mann

Colorado Springs, Colo., March 23 (INS).—Any hope of humanity for the future must be based on the complete defeat of Hitler—and that defeat cannot be accomplished without the aid of the United States.

That was the belief expressed tonight by Thomas Mann, famous German novelist and Nobel Prize winner, who addressed a packed house at the Colorado Springs Art Center.

"Hitler will never fall without utter defeat," the German exiled writer declared. "The war would just result in a stalemate otherwise, and there would be no hope for peace and order.

"If the English can hold out for another four months, with or without American aid, Hitler will be defeated. Rest assured, however, that he will do all in his power to crush England within the next four months."

Man Injured, Motorist Held

Edwin Marques, 122 Willow Avenue, Takoma Park, Md., suffered knee injuries last night when his automobile was in collision with a car operated, police said, by James J. Perry, colored, of 909 Westminster Street Northwest, yesterday at Philadelphia and Piney Branch Roads.

Perry was charged with operating an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor and was being held at the Takoma Park, Md., police station in lieu of $1,000 bond. Police said he ran past a stop sign. Marques was taken to Washington Sanitarium and Hospital at Takoma Park by the Silver Spring, Md., Rescue Squad.

$300 Fellowship To Honor Editor

Establishment of a $300 fellowship at the University of Alabama in memory of Grover Cleveland Hall, late editor of the Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser, was announced here yesterday.

The fellowship will be awarded to the student who best typifies the ideals of the famous editor, who earned national acclaim as a crusader against bigotry when he was awarded a Pulitzer prize in 1927 for editorials against the Ku Klux Klan and racial and religious intolerance.

Md. Almshouses Likened To Europe's Prison Camps

Hardships undergone by old people in Maryland's almshouses are likened to those of the inmates of European concentration camps in a statement issued yesterday by Mrs. Minnie Hostetler, president of the Montgomery County League of Women Voters.

"Old people, crippled and deformed, waiting on others confined to their beds by cancer, arthritis or failing faculties; old people without a nurse or a regular physician; old people, without a change of clothing, without towels, washcloths, soap or combs; old people in rooms without curtains, rugs, chairs or dressers; old people without a friend," Mrs. Hostetler said. "These are not old people of the concentration camps of Europe, nor are these elements of emotional outbursts of the sentimental."

"These are old people of Maryland and their physical condition has been diagnosed by Maryland physicians; their living conditions investigated by the Governor's commision. Case by case, the records of 510 are described in Research Report No. 2 of the Maryland Legislative Council.

"Unless we convince Gov. O'Conor that we do not wish to postpone providing proper institutions for their care in the State, the counties will have to dig down and find money to do so. Now that the facts have been made public, we cannot let the conditions continue."

The League of Women Voters is carrying on a campaign to force provision of two State hospitals for the chronically ill, funds for which are being held up by Gov. O'Conor as an economy measure. The league is urging all friends of old people to write to the Governor and to their local legislators urging that provision for the almshouses be made at this session of the Legislature to avoid a two-year wait.

Playing on Ice, 4 Children in One Family Drown

Herminie, Pa., March 23 (AP).—A happy afternoon of kite-flying ended in tragedy today when four children of John Kustra, a WPA worker, plunged through the weak ice of a pond and drowned. The victims were Mary, 9; John, jr., 7; Peter, 6, and Annie, 5.

The string of the kite snared on a tree and the kite nose-dived onto ice weakened by warm weather. The youngsters raced out to retrieve it. Mary fell through and pulled the others with her. Little Annie, holding the hand of Peter, was the last to disappear.

Their father, among the first to reach the scene, chopped down a tree so that firemen could clamber out on it to recover the bodies. The lifeless hands of two of the children still clutched pieces of the string.

U. S. Acts to Condemn Area Around Memorial

Mr. and Mrs. William I. Shields, Gettysburg, are the owners according to records of the case.

Md. Parley On Welfare Set for May

By the Associated Press

La Plata, Md., March 23.—Charles Stokes, executive secretary of the Charles County Welfare Board, said today the Maryland Conference of Social Welfare would hold its annual meeting "early in May" at Baltimore.

Plans of the one and one-half day meeting are being made by James M. Hepbron, of Baltimore, conference president, and date of the session and the program will be announced soon, Stokes declared.

"Social welfare and its relationship to national defense will be major topic before the conference," Stokes said.

Speakers and discussion leaders will include outstanding social welfare workers of Maryland as well as nationally known authorities in the welfare field.

Hepbron, director of the Community Fund of Baltimore, explained that the conference is an open forum, welcoming anyone interested in social welfare. While most conference members are social workers or workers in related fields, many nonprofessional persons attend the meetings.

The Maryland Conference of Social Welfare, Hepbron said, first met in 1904, at Easton. Early meetings of the conference were concerned chiefly with private charities, since there were then few public welfare programs in Maryland.

With the rapid development of public welfare programs during the depression years, the conference has given it increasing attention, although continuing its interest in a wide variety of private welfare activities. Attendance at the conference meetings has increased each year, with approximately 700 persons attending the 1940 meeting.

Starnes Ascribes Strikes to Agents Of Hitler, Stalin

Sioux Falls, S. Dak., March 23 (AP). Representative Joe Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, member of the Dies Committee, said here today that current strikes "generally have been engineered by Fifth Column representatives of Hitler, Stalin and Mussolini."

"Heading these subversive groups," he said, "are the consular and diplomatic agents of those countries who, cloaked with immunity because of their office, have proceeded to support those groups who are seeking to undermine this Nation and disrupt our unity."

Starnes, addressing the spring conference of the South Dakota department of the American Legion, advocated legislation for immediate mandatory deportation of alien "spies and saboteurs," outlawing use of the mails for dissemination of foreign propaganda and "withdrawal of State and national aid to all educational institutions which permit their faculty members to teach foreign isms."

Colored Unit Aids U. S. Job Seekers

The Outer Guard, a group of Negro stenographers and secretaries employed by the Government, is arranging a list of competent Negro stenographers who are available for employment.

The group says it sometimes has opportunity to recommend good stenographers for jobs. The registration will be held tomorrow, Wednesday and Thursday at the Twelfth Street Y. M. C. A. from 7 p. m. to 9:30 p. m. Dictation will be given at 8 p. m. in speeds of 80, 96 and 110 words a minute. The group emphasized in its announcement that it makes no pretense of guaranteeing jobs, but "only promises active interest in the persons selected for its lists." There are no fees.

9:45 a. m., WJSV—Some daily programs commence a new time schedule. Hymns of All Churches switches to WJSV at 9:45 a. m. from WRC at 2. Light of the World on WRC is heard at 2 instead of 2:45. Arnold Grimm's Daughter commences at 2:45, half-hour later than usual.

2:15, WRC—The Mystery Man's entrance is one of the results of the above changes. This series will adapt notable detective yarns for serial telling. Mary Roberts Rinehart's "The Window at the White Cat" is the opener.

6, WJSV—Commentators Edwin C. Hill and Bob Trout shift their schedules somewhat. Hill will talk from 6 to 6:10, Trout from 6:10 to 6:15.

8, WRC—The "Skaters' Waltz," composed by Emil Waldteufel for the Princess Eugenie, affords a tuneful duet for James Melton and Francia Waite on the Telephone Hour.

8:30, WJSV—"You're Not the Only Pebble on the Beach," sings Beatrice Kay, after which Joe E. Howard chants of "The Kitty and the Owl" on the Gay Nineties Revue.

8:30, WRC—Richard Crooks makes his final Voice of Firestone date this season from Miami, where he offers Massenet's "Dream" from "Manon," "A Dream" by Grieg and "Kathleen Mavourneen."

9, WJSV—Robert Taylor and Ruth Hussey play their film roles in "Flight Command."

9:30, WMAL—The Chamber Music Society of Lower Basin Street seems to be going on the air five minutes earlier than its wont, but that also seems to mean it will be off five minutes sooner.

10, WMAL—"War in the Middle East" titles a talk by Joseph M. Levy of the New York Times Middle East staff.

Joe Emerson's "Hymns of All Churches" becomes a Columbia network feature today and you can hear it over WJSV Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays from now on from 9:45 to 10 a. m.

Along with his own very pleasant barytone voice, Emerson brings with him to the program an eight-voice choir and an instrumental group under the direction of Fred Jacky, a member of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra.

Ever since his youthful days in Grand Rapids, Michigan, when Joe was a boy soprano in St. Mark's Episcopal Church, he has been collecting the lore of religious songs, and one of the highlights of the programs will be his informal introductions which will tell of stories that inspired the compositions.

The series is being sponsored by General Mills and the reason for its not being heard on Wednesdays and Fridays is that General Mills has reserved the time on those days for a new program by Betty Crocker, the well-known domestic science expert, who will use the 15 minutes to give household hints, recipes and menus.

Incidentally, Bob Trout and Edwin C. Hill, two of CBS's best known news broadcasters, are shifting their times today. Hill's "The Human Side of the News" is to be heard from 6 to 6:10 p. m. and Trout will be heard from 6:10 to 6:15.

The extensive anticyclone that was over most of the country last night now shows two separate centers, one in the northern Great Plains States with highest pressure at Williston, N. Dak., 1032.9 millibars (30.50 inches), and the other centered about 300 miles east of Norfolk, Va., with highest pressure about 1038.0 millibars (30.31 inches). The western anticyclone is accompanied by cold dry air of polar origin, while the eastern anticyclone consists of old polar air that has become quite moist and warm after a lengthy sojourn over the Atlantic Ocean and the Gulf of Mexico. The lowest pressures in the trough between these anticyclones occur at Monroe, La., 1015.2 millibars (29.98 inches), and at Grand Rapids, Mich., 1017.6 millibars (30.05 inches). The disturbance in the southwest remains in approximately the same position with lowest pressure at Kingman, Ariz., 1003.7 millibars (29.64 inches). In the past 24 hours temperatures have fallen in the northern Rocky Mountain region and in the northern Plains States; while it has become warmer along the Atlantic Coast.

Blessing Seen For New York In Waterway

Copyright by New York Times

Development of the St. Lawrence power projects will enable New York State industries to tap the "largest single source of electric energy in North America," the Department of Commerce stated in a report made public yesterday, and will offer a "new lease on life" to an area that has experienced 20 years of declining industrial activity.

The report is the third of a series of seven prepared by the St. Lawrence survey at the request of President Roosevelt.

The proposed power development, the report said, will make available 2,200,000 horse power of additional hydro-electric generating capacity at the international rapids, to be divided equally with Canada. The area to be served coincides approximately with New York State and includes New York City.

Downward Trend

"New York State as a whole has suffered a definite decline in manufacturing employment in the past 20 years," the report states. "In 1919 New York State had 1,228,000 wage earners employed in manufacturing, or 13.5 per cent of the national total. By 1937 the number had fallen to 996,000, or 11.6 per cent of the national total."

This downward trend was attributed to the report to New York's failure to expand its hydroelectric generating capacity as rapidly as other States. The availability of cheap electric power, according to the report, would "make possible the resumption of manfacturing growth."

"It is fairly clear that New York State will suffer an increasing competitive disadvantage so long as available sources of cheap hydro power continue to be neglected," the report stated. "In the Buffalo area, where industry has been based on cheap power to a relatively large extent, the threat of stagnation is perhaps even more serious than in the rest of the State."

An added economic advantage of the power development on the St. Lawrence, the report asserted, will be the reduction in the cost of electric energy to domestic consumers in towns and on farms. At present, it was stated, the "cost of electricity to most representative classes of users in New York State is higher than the United States average."

In terms of savings to commercial and industrial users of electric energy in New York State the report concludes that "a 25 per cent reduction in industrial and commercial rates errs if anything on the side of conservatism. A greater reduction, it seems not unlikely, would provide still further stimulus to energy sales as well as to profits."

Goebbels Hard To Get, Students Learn for $2.50

Ashland, Va., March 23 (AP).—It cost three Randolph-Macon students and a newspaper reporter $2.50 and a lot of sleep to learn Germany's propaganda minister, Joseph Goebbels, isn't easy to reach by telephone.

Students Brooks Young, Lee Paul and Anderson Bland, and Reporter Dick Gillis, of the Hanover County Herald-Progress, decided to ask Goebbels what Adolf Hitler thought of the lease-lend bill. They would have phoned the Fuehrer if he could speak English.

Gillis placed the call and in five minutes a voice in Berlin said Goebbels was asleep. Two hours later the operator wanted to know who was calling Goebbels, why, and what organization he represented. He was just a plain American citizen and didn't represent anybody or anything, Gillis said, whereupon the operator said she'd call back. Finally, at 2 a. m., the operator asked if Gillis still desired to talk. Gillis and his friends were pretty sleepy by that time.

The telephone company billed them for $2.50 in service charges.

Baering Down On the News

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer

I'm the kind of a fellow like the chameleon on the Scotch plaid who is a little of everything.

I read the isolationists and figure they're as right as water in an irrigation ditch. Then I read the interventionists and I run 2,240 pounds of belligerence to the ton.

I think President Roosevelt and Senator Wheeler are as sincere as a clam digger with seaweed in his hair. But like an African witch doctor and the Mayo brothers they seem to have different methods, and have graduated from different schools of thought.

I wonder if those fellows ever meet in Washington at parties and things. I'll bet they give each other a colder handshake than a Penguin's foot.

I've got a sneaking notion the President's thermometer and the one carried by Senator Wheeler wouldn't agree in a forest fire.

Silver Spring Pilot Saves Pay In Britain to Buy Airport Here

Letter to Mother Says 'We Hardly Ever See a German Plane'

Flying in the British war zone is not such bad business, judging from letters which Mrs. Polly Trumbell, of Silver Spring, Md., receives from her 25-year-old son, Clark L. Trumbell, jr.

In his latest letter, Trumbell, who is ferrying planes from factories to combat bases under contract with the British Overseas Airways Corporation, outlined his and other American pilots' plan to pool their savings and build an airport when they get back.

Trumbell, who is saving $110 of his $150 weekly salary, said the group of 10 American pilots planned to save $5,000 apiece for the airport project.

At that rate, Trumbell will have saved his $5,000 by the time his contract expires in September. "I hope this means he's coming back then," Mrs. Trumbell said.

Trumbell, a flying enthusiast all his life, got his pilot's training at College Park Airport and later taught flying at the Congressional Airport.

In most of his letters the Silver Spring pilot, speaks of the fine treatment accorded American pilots in England. The airdrome where he was stationed for awhile was, before the war, a country club owned by Sir Lindsey and Lady Everards.

"Actually we are guests of Sir Lindsey and Lady Everards," he wrote last December 14. "Both are very nice to us. We live in a large country estate—36 acres with butler, footman and all. Seems hard to believe, but that is how it is. We have very good food. Lady Everards is planning a Christmas dinner and party for us, so things won't be so bad at all."

On December 29, he wrote: "We are having it very quiet here. Hardly ever hear a German plane at night and they have quit coming over in the day as about 99 per cent get shot down."

In one letter, Trumbell mentioned that "anything containing sugar is a luxury." His mother sent him some chocolates and sugar. "The candy," he wrote back, "was badly mashed but still edible."

In a recent letter, Trumbell inclosed a picture of himself, with hirsute adornment on the upper lip. ". . . Note the moustache—very English don't you think," was his comment.

Md. Man Dies In 104th Year

Oakland, Md., March 23 (AP).—George Marley, Garrett County's oldest citizen, who would have been 105 years old April 1, died today at the home of a daughter, Mrs. D. R. Hinebaugh, at Deer Park.

Born in England in 1836, Mr. Marley came to the United States at the outbreak of the Civil War and enlisted in the Union Army in 1861. He fought in the battles of Gettysburg, Antietam and the Wilderness, and was twice wounded in an engagement at Cape Hatteras.

On his 101st birthday the King and Queen of England, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and the late Gov. Harry W. Nice were among those who sent him congratulations.

Always a stanch Democrat, Marley cast his vote for President Roosevelt in the last election.

New St. Marys Jail Is Urged By Grand Jury

By the Associated Press.

Leonardtown, Md., March 23.—Commissioners of St. Mary's County studied today a recommendation of the grand jury that they "avail themselves of the WPA fund with which to erect a new jail."

The grand jury for the spring term of circuit court suggested that the present jail could be remodeled and used for various county offices.

"We have examined the court house and surroundings," the jury declared in its report to the court, "and find the outside toilets in a very unsanitary condition and a menace to public health, and recommend the removal of same or sufficient sanitary facilities be provided for the general public."

Previous St. Mary's grand juries have recommended erection of a new jail here.

Public Health Tests Start Today In Alexandria

Alexandria food handlers, barbers, beauticians, school teachers and others "in regular contact with the public" will undergo health examinations starting today at the city health department.

Examinations will be held five evenings a week from 7 to 10 o'clock, but applicants must register at the health department for appointments.

Laboratory tests and X-ray examinations are required under the law, Dr. Brown said, and a standard charge of $1.65 a person has been set. Persons who, on the basis of these examinations, are suspected of having any communicable disease, may be required to undergo further examination and treatment.

The ordnance provides that all persons failing to undergo the examinations will be subject to arrest and the imposition of fines not exceeding $100, imprisonment not to exceed 60 days, or both.

Derwood Man Faces Charge Of Manslaughter

Charges of manslaughter were preferred yesterday against Leslie J. Lawson, of Derwood, Md., by Maryland State Policeman Joseph Cushwa, of the Waterloo substation. The charges resulted from the death Saturday night of Stewart V. Dorsey, colored, of Simpsonville, Md.

Dorsey was brought into the office of Dr. J. W. Bird at Sandy Spring after he had been struck by an automobile while walking along the Howard County road near his home. Dr. C. E. Hawks, Montgomery County medical examiner, issued a certificate of death from a fractured skull.

Lawson was arrested and charged by Cushwa after an investigation. Police said that the accident happened while two cars were passing and that the driver is believed to have been blinded by headlights.

Alexandria Group Assails Report on Jail

A report on conditions at Alexandria's city jail, submitted last week by a commission appointed in 1940 by Judge William P. Woolls, of the Corporation Court, presents a fairly accurate picture of needed physical improvements, "but as to actual conditions existing at the jail, has little or nothing to say," the jail committee of the Alexandria Junior Chamber of Commerce charges in a statement prepared as a response to the commission report.

The statement, signed by the five members of the Jaycee committee, alleges that the official jail commission was appointed by Judge Woolls early in 1940, but failed to make an investigation until last month, four days after the Junior Chamber of Commerce released a report of the findings of its own jail committee. The latter's report described conditions at the jail as being "deplorable," after having stated in a preliminary report that "the Black Hole of Calcutta is a summer resort compared to the cell block of the City Jail."

Although the two reports had been described as contrasing sharply," the Junior Chamber of Commerce committee stated there appeared to be little variance between the two, but charged that the official report failed to give a complete picture of condjtions. It pointed out that recommendations made by the jail commission confirmed in part the findings of its own report, with respect to needed improvements.

In response to the jail commission's statement that the personnel and attendants at the jail are excellent, the Junior Chamber committee said its report had made no criticism of the attendants and felt them capable of holding their positions, but added: "However, we feel that the present personnel would be materially benefited if they were to take advantage of the Federal Government's offer to send them to Federal prison schools at the Government's expense."

Alexandria Rifles To Be Mustered Tonight

Alexandria's Virginia Protective Force unit, designated as Company 112, has adopted the name of the "Alexandria Rifles," after the first volunteer militia company to be formed in Alexandria, the "Belle Haven Rifles," formed prior to the Revolutionary War when Alexandria was known as Belhaven, according to announcement by Capt. Everett A. Hellmuth, commanding officer. The company will be formally mustered by representatives of the State protective force from Richmond at its regular drill tonight at 7:30 in the city armory.

Capt. Hellmuth said the company needs only one more volunteer to complete its minimum muster roll, but any men who volunteer tonight will be named as charter members, even though the minimum quota might be exceeded. Enlistments will continue, he said, until the company's maximum strength, as permitted by law, has been reached.

The Alexandria branch of "Bundles for Britain" will sponsor a benefit tea at the home of Miss Gertrude Crilly, 607 Cameron Street, on Wednesday afternoon at 2:30. Public patronage is invited. The committee will present a guest speaker from the British Embassy.
